Panel Discussion: A cross-jurisdictional conversation among experienced arbitrators

Date: Tuesday 8 November 2022

Time: 9.00 am – 10.15 am (AEDT)

Between 7-11 of November, ACICA is hosting the Australian Arbitration Week 2022, a series of events dedicated to arbitration practitioners and facilitated by experts in the field.

Corrs Chambers Westgarth is proud to participate by hosting a panel discussion among leading arbitrators and arbitration practitioners who will explore how the diversity of legal backgrounds and cultures influences international arbitral practice and procedure.

We invite you to join us in-person or online for this interactive discussion which will cover topics including:

- how legal traditions and cultural backgrounds influence counsel and the tribunal's approach to questions of procedure and evidence, contractual and statutory interpretation, legal reasoning, and governing laws;
- how advocates should prepare for appearances before a cross-jurisdictional tribunal;
- whether international commercial arbitration has become unduly reliant upon both the common and civil law traditions at the expense of other legal traditions and changing legal cultures.

There will be an opportunity for those attending in person to network with peers following the event.
