

PRELIMINARY REPORT OF THE TASK FORCE ON UNIFORM RULES

June 7, 2021

Opinions expressed are those of Task Force preparing this Report and do not represent those of the New York State Bar Association unless and until they have been adopted by its House of Delegates or Executive Committee.

I. INTRODUCTION

On December 29, 2020, Chief Administrative Judge Lawrence Marks issued an order adopting 29 new rules into the Uniform Rules for the Supreme Court and the County Court, effective February 1, 2021, based upon rules of the Commercial Division. These new rules were not subject to a comment period, although in 2019, the OCA Advisory Committee on Civil Practice was asked to study all of the rules of the Commercial Division, and that Committee's report was posted for comment. (See Section II., below). Notice of these changes did not reach the leaders of the New York State Bar Association until mid-January, 2021. NYSBA immediately launched a series of CLE programs to familiarize the lawyers of the state with the new rules shortly after the rules became effective.

As lawyers became familiar with the new rules, NYSBA leaders began hearing comments about the unwelcome changes imposed by the new rules. In addition to complaints about the lack of substantial notice and opportunity to comment on proposed rules, there were specific comments regarding the difficulty of applying many of the rules, which were created for large commercial cases, to the broad panoply of actions and proceedings in Supreme and County Courts.

On April 12, 2021, the first meeting of the NYSBA House of Delegates following the effective date of the new rules, the following resolution was passed by an overwhelming majority of the House:

“Be it resolved that based upon the significant concern expressed by the membership of NYSBA, that the President, or his designees immediately reach out to the administrative judges, the OCA, or the Chief Judge as is appropriate, to request an immediate meeting to discuss the staying of the rules adopted by the Administrative Order AO/270/2020 dated December 31, 2020 by Chief Administrative Judge Marks for a period of one year so that all stakeholders can adequately examine and comment on the rules as well as the impact that the rules will have on attorneys and their clients especially the underserved portion of our population and further to examine the cost and impact that these rules will have on access to justice by all segments of our population but especially amongst the underrepresented portions. It is further resolved that a copy of this resolution will be immediately delivered to the administrative board of the courts.

This resolution also had the support of a number of Sections of NYSBA, including the Judicial Section.

In accordance with the resolution, then President Scott Karson contacted Chief Administrative Judge Marks to urge the imposition of an immediate stay of enforcement of the new rules to permit NYSBA to comment fully upon them. Shortly thereafter, Mr. Karson created this Task Force to coordinate the efforts of NYSBA in furtherance of the resolution.

The Task Force elicited input regarding the rules in two major ways. First, all NYSBA Sections and Committees were invited to send comments to the Task Force by July 1, 2021. Second, the Task Force created four open forums on May 14 and 15, 2021, inviting all NYSBA members, all local and specialty bars, and any New York lawyer to attend in order for the Task Force to hear their comments. Despite relatively short notice, and the difficulties of finding time within work schedules to attend a two hour forum, approximately 400 lawyers registered for the forums. The Task Force heard many comments from them—some representing themselves, and some representing local bar associations—and many of them participated in a survey launched during the forum. The survey results are set forth in Section IV, below. The comments received from the forums are covered in the substantive sections of this report: Sections V – VIII, below.

On June 1, 2021, Chief Administrator Marks informed NYSBA leaders that the Administrative Board had declined to issue a stay, but was willing to make appropriate changes in the rules, and invited NYSBA to make any such recommendations. The leadership is considering appropriate response to this news.

This is a preliminary report. The final report awaits input from NYSBA Sections and Committees. The final report will also include specific language changes, where appropriate, to individual rules.

II. HISTORY OF “NEW RULES”

In 2018, the Advisory Committee on Civil Practice (“Advisory Committee”) was asked to evaluate the rules of the Commercial Division (202.70) to discern which of the rules should be adopted for use in all civil cases. The Advisory Committee spent several months studying the rules and seeking input from judges and court personnel in addition to their members who have expertise in procedural laws and rules. In July, 2018, the Advisory Committee released its report. In the report, it made the following recommendations: 1) that “wholesale adoption of the rules statewide is not warranted,”<sup>1</sup> 2) that some of the rules may “add to the costs of litigation and/or place an added burden on the already strained resources of the courts,”<sup>2</sup> 3) that “statewide application of some rules would be inappropriate given the disparate caseloads among the various courts,”<sup>3</sup> and 4) that some of the rules “would be unworkable in the many cases where the amount at issue may not justify the more attorney-intensive efforts that are expended in large commercial cases.”<sup>4</sup>

The Advisory Committee then recommended adopting nine of the Commercial Division rules for general use and recommended against adopting the remaining Commercial Division rules. The report addresses each rule, setting forth the reasons for recommending either the adoption or rejection of the rule's application to all civil matters. The Advisory Committee's Report is attached as Appendix 1.

On October 15, 2018, John W. McConnell, then Counsel to OCA, disseminated the Report with a request for public comment. The request for public comment was titled "Request for Public Comment on the Proposed Adoption of Certain Rules of the Commercial Division in Other Courts of Civil Jurisdiction." The memorandum seeking public comment states that the Advisory Committee recommended nine Commercial Part rules. The final sentence of the memorandum is "The Administrative Board is now seeking public comment on the recommendations set forth in the Advisory Committee's Report." A copy of the Memorandum is attached as Appendix 2.

It is not clear how the request for comment was disseminated, other than the posting on the New York Courts website. In November, 2018, the New York State Bar Association's CPLR Committee ("CPLR Committee") addressed the Request for Comment. It is not known how the CPLR Committee became aware of the Advisory Committee Report; it may have been through the staff liaison, Ron Kennedy, or it may have been through one of the members of the CPLR Committee who also serve on the Advisory Committee.<sup>5</sup> The CPLR Committee only addressed the nine rules recommended by the Advisory Committee, understanding that the request to comment related to the adoption of "certain rules of the Commercial Division" and the direction was to comment directly on the Advisory Committee's Report and its recommendations. The CPLR Committee did not understand the request for comment to require the evaluation of all of the rules of the Commercial Division.

<sup>5</sup> James Blair, Sharon Stern Gerstman and Thomas Gleason are active members of both the CPLR Committee and the Advisory Committee.

The CPLR Committee issued two Memoranda. The first, on January 11, 2019, supported the Advisory Committee's recommendations with respect to 8 of the 9 provisions. With respect to Rule 19-a, concerning motions for summary judgment, the CPLR Committee requested additional time in order to receive a report from a subcommittee and then vote at a meeting on January 18, 2019. On January 24, 2019, the CPLR Committee issued its second Memorandum, which opposed the application of Rule 19-a to all civil cases. The CPLR Committee also urged that if such a rule were to be adopted, that the imposition of the requirement for a statement of undisputed facts be left to the discretion of the judge, as the Commercial Division rule provides, and not mandatorily imposed on all cases, as the Advisory Committee recommended. Both Memoranda were issued by NYSBA's Government Affairs Office on letterhead that clearly shows that the views are those of the CPLR Committee, and which includes the standard language for a report of a section or committee: "Opinions expressed are those of the Section/Committee preparing this memorandum and do not represent those of the New York State Bar association unless and until they have been adopted by its House of Delegates or Executive Committee." In accordance with NYSBA by-laws, and the usual practice of the Government Affairs Office, the memoranda would also have been sent to the Association president. A copy of the CPLR Committee's Memoranda are attached as Appendix 3.

Four other entities provided comments:

1. On January 28, 2019, the New York City Bar commented on some (but not all) of the nine rules recommended by the Advisory Committee, and also commented on seven rules which were rejected by the Advisory Committee for statewide application, but only sought adoption of two of them.

2. On December 11, 2018, the Matrimonial Practices Advisory and Rules Committee commented on the nine recommendations and indicated that a number of these rules were in conflict with existing rules concerning matrimonial actions.
3. On January 28, 2019, an organization, “Managing Attorneys and Clerks Association, Inc.”<sup>6</sup> commented on some (but not all) of the nine rules recommended by the Advisory Committee, and also commented on several other provisions which were rejected by the Advisory Committee, seeking the adoption of five of them, and opposing the adoption of four of them.
4. On January 14, 2019, the Corporation Counsel for the City of New York commented on one rule recommended by the Advisory Committee: Rule 11-b concerning privilege logs.

A copy of the comments of these four entities is attached as Appendix 4.

After the comment period in January 2019, there was no further request for comment or any notification to NYSBA or any other bar association that the Administrative Board was considering a broad adoption of 29 of the Commercial Division Rules, until January 2021, after the Administrative Board had acted, announcing that the rules would become effective February 1, 2021.

<sup>6</sup> Managing Attorneys and Clerks Association, Inc. was incorporated in 2012, but may have been in existence for a longer period of time. According to a 2013 law.com article (<https://www.law.com/corpcounsel/almID/1365753527511/New-Group-Brings-Together-Legal-Dept-Managing-Attorneys/>), it is made up of Managing Attorneys and Managing Clerks of New York City law firms and legal departments. Many of their officers and directors are non-lawyers, who work as managing clerks, overseeing non-attorney staff at the constituent firms.

III. CONFLICTS BETWEEN COURT RULES and the CPLR

When the CPLR was enacted in 1962, some of its provisions were designated with section numbers (laws) and some were designated with the letter “R” (rules). Amendment to the laws was reserved to the legislature, but amendment to the rules could be effected by either the legislature or by the Judicial Conference, established under the Judiciary Law, subject to legislative approval.<sup>1</sup> In 1978, the power of the Judicial Conference to so amend the rules was rescinded,<sup>2</sup> and amendment of both the laws and rules of the CPLR was made within the exclusive control of the legislature. There have been attempts to empower the Chief Administrator of the Courts with the ability to amend the rules of the CPLR, without success.<sup>3</sup>

The Courts are empowered to adopt rules concerning the conduct of court proceedings, subject to the limitations of the Constitution, Article 6, §30.<sup>4</sup> Any rules adopted cannot impair substantive rights and must be consistent with existing legislation. Rules which enlarge or abridge rights, or which impose procedural burdens which impair statutory rights or remedies may be stricken or limited.<sup>5</sup> The rule-making authority of the Courts is not subject to the Administrative Procedure Act; it is thus limited only by these principles as set forth in the Constitution and the Judiciary Law, as delineated by the Court of Appeals.

Since the adoption of the first set of Uniform Rules for Trial Courts in 1986, there has been an increase in the number of rules, many of which have substantive effect. Some rules have become the only source of procedure for a significant aspect of the case.<sup>6</sup> This trend makes it increasingly difficult for practitioners, particularly those who do not litigate frequently or whose practice is primarily in another jurisdiction, who would likely turn to the CPLR for the source of procedure. This is particularly true where the relevant CPLR provision is extensive (e.g. CPLR 3212 on Summary Judgment) and includes a detailed list of the documents which must be included in any submission to the court (e.g. CPLR 3212(b) which sets forth all of the documents which are required to be attached to a motion for summary judgment; a “statement of material facts” is not included.).

A proliferation of rules adds cost to the proceeding. The time necessary to ensure compliance with all rules is either passed on as cost to the client or is to be borne by the lawyer. Unless additional rules are necessary in order to ensure that civil actions proceed efficiently and fairly, the additional rules are harmful to the process.

Even worse is when the rules either encroach or conflict with rules within the CPLR. At least five of the “new rules” do so:

A. §202.20-a. Privilege Logs (based upon Commercial Division Rule 11-b(a))<sup>7</sup> This rule allows the party requesting documents to specify whether the privilege log may cover categories of documents or must provide for a document by document review. If the party insists upon a document by document privilege log, the rule provides for cost-shifting. CPLR 3122(b) clearly provides for a document by document privilege log, without any additional burden to be placed upon the party seeking disclosure. Thus, the cost-shifting provisions of §202.20-a encroach upon a party’s rights as set forth in CPLR 3122(b).

B. §202.20-f. Disclosure Disputes (based upon Commercial Division Rule 14)<sup>8</sup>. This rule limits the ability of a party to make a motion regarding a discovery dispute. It requires the movant to first consult with other counsel to resolve the dispute, and the failure to so consult, “may result in the denial of a discovery motion...or in such motion being held in abeyance until the informal resolution procedures of the court are conducted.” It should be noted that §202.7(a) and (c) require the moving party in a discovery dispute to include an affirmation that either a good faith effort to resolve the dispute was made, or an indication of “good cause why no such conferral with counsel for opposing parties was held.” In contrast, §202.20-f relieves the moving party from conferral only in “exigent circumstances.” While a motion may be denied without the requisite affirmation,<sup>9</sup> a strict requirement to “meet and confer” before a motion may be heard, is tantamount to seeking permission from the court to calendar the motion, and it is in conflict with the CPLR.<sup>10</sup>

C. §202.8-d. Orders to Show Cause (based upon Commercial Rule 19).<sup>11</sup> This rule limits Orders to Show Cause to instances where “there is a genuine urgency, ....a stay is required or a statute mandates so proceeding.” This standard is contrary to the provision of the CPLR governing Orders to Show Cause (CPLR 2214(d)), which permits an order to show cause in any “proper case.”

D. §202.8-g. Motions for Summary Judgment: Statements of Material Facts (based upon Commercial Rule 19-a).<sup>12</sup> This rule requires the inclusion by the moving party of a “short and concise statement, in numbered paragraphs, of the material facts as to which the moving party contends there is no genuine issue to be tried.” It also requires the opposing party to include “a correspondingly numbered paragraph responding to each numbered paragraph in the statement of the moving party.” The rule specifies what must be included in both the statement and response to the statement, and also provides in subsection c: “Each numbered paragraph in the statement of material facts required to be served by the moving party will be deemed to be admitted unless specifically controverted by a correspondingly numbered paragraph in the statement required to be served by the opposing party.” This particular provision is contrary to the CPLR in a number of ways. First, the statement of material facts acts as a “Notice to Admit,” the procedure for which is covered in CPLR 3123. Among other provisions, CPLR 3123(b) allows for a limitation on any deemed admission, and an opportunity to reverse the admission. §202.8-g does not so provide. The effect of the admission provided for in subsection (c) may result in the grant of summary judgment despite the fact that the opponent of the motion has “shown facts sufficient to require a trial of [an] issue of fact.” CPLR 3212(b) provides that in such a case, summary judgment is to be denied.

E. §202.8-e Temporary Restraining Orders (based on Commercial Rule 20).<sup>13</sup>

This rule provides that a temporary restraining order cannot be made ex parte, without a showing of “significant prejudice by reason of giving notice, or that notice could not be given despite a good faith effort.” This is in direct conflict with CPLR 6313, which provides that in a motion for preliminary injunction, upon a showing of immediate and irreparable injury, a temporary restraining order may be granted without notice.

When there is a possible or actual conflict with the CPLR, not only must the practitioner be aware of the CPLR and the Uniform Rules, but also the application of the case law pertaining to the conflict, as it develops. While the law is clear that a direct conflict must be resolved in favor of the existing statute,<sup>14</sup> practitioners are put in a no-man's land if there is not yet case law particular to the CPLR provision and the rule in potential conflict. For this reason, it is important that the rules avoid any possibility of such a conflict or encroachment. Perhaps, it is reason alone to rescind each the rules which create the direct or potential conflict.

IV. GENERAL COMMENTS TO THE NEW RULES

The Committee received comments from a variety of attorneys including those in solo or small firms and those in large firms and practitioners from rural areas of the state as well as the large metropolitan areas. Comments were received from practitioners who were familiar with the Commercial Division Rules and those whose practices (ex. Legal aid, matrimonial, personal injury) had not previously dealt with Commercial Division Rules. We also received comments from court attorneys and judges.

While there were a few comments which were either wholly in favor of all the new rules or wholly against all the new rules, the majority of comments received were directed against certain rules. While some of the comments against some of the rules were very specific, many of the comments raised similar concerns. These general concerns included:

- 1) Time and cost involved in compliance with the new rules;

<sup>14</sup> People v. Ramos, 85 N.Y.2d 678 (1995); A.G. Ship Maintenance Corp. v. Lezak, 69 N.Y.2d 1 (1986).

- 2) Unnecessary sanctions;
- 3) Tone of rules; and
- 4) General comments on rules.

A. TIME AND COST ISSUES

With regard to time and cost issues, commenters noted the inability to take on smaller cases due to the added time required to handle the case and the added cost to the client occasioned by the additional hours of attorney time necessary to complete the task. By way of example, a practitioner in Westchester County commented he would now be reluctant to represent a client whose case may have a value of $30,000. Whereas the rules previous applied only to cases in the commercial part, where the monetary threshold for Westchester County is $100,000, the application of these rules to all cases renders the smaller cases "not worth the time and effort" for the amount the client may ultimately recover after attorney's fees and added costs.

Similar comments were received from practitioners in the matrimonial field who commented that their clients are "people not corporations" on whom the new rules have a significant monetary impact. Commenters also indicated their inability to take on the number of pro bono cases they would typically accept due to added time and cost issues. Legal services providers commented on their inability to obtain the services of outside attorneys to assist their indigent clients as a result of the new rule requirements. One rural commenter stated that due to his inability to take on smaller cases for clients who could not afford added costs, he was considering early retirement. This must be viewed in conjunction with the NYSBA Report and Recommendations of the Task Force on Rural Justice (April 2020) which addressed the access to justice issues prevalent in rural areas of the state (existing before the advent of the new rules). A copy of the Report of the Task Force on Rural Justice is annexed as Appendix 5. See also Section D, below, for survey results on the cost of the new rules.

B. UNNECESSARY SANCTIONS

Comments on sanctions primarily concerned § 202.1 – Appearance by counsel with knowledge and authority (based upon Commercial Division Rule 1(a) and (c)). Comments supported the provision requiring that counsel be familiar with the case and be fully prepared and authorized to discuss and resolve the issues which are "scheduled to be the subject of the appearance." Most commenters, however, felt the sanctions, granting a default judgment under Uniform Rule 202.27, or the imposition of financial sanctions under 130.21 were unduly harsh and unnecessary.

Concerns were raised from small practitioners who use the services of a per diem attorney who, although provided with case information, may not be fully prepared if the judge decides to discuss issues which were not anticipated to be the subject of the appearance (i.e., settlement demand or settlement authority at a discovery conference). For the same reason, experienced counsel felt this rule would inhibit sending new, less experienced attorneys to discovery (or status) conferences to gain experience appearing before the Court. Notably Rule 202.1 was not recommended by either the OCA Advisory Committee on Civil Practice and was never commented upon by NYSBA's CPLR Committee, or any other entity providing comments.

Sanction concerns were also raised in connection with §202.20-e Discovery Schedules (based upon Commercial Division Rule 13(a) and (b)) which requires strict compliance with discovery orders. Noncompliance may result in imposition of "an appropriate sanction" or other relief under CPLR 3126.

Comments on §202.23 Consultation Prior to Preliminary and Compliance Conferences (based upon Commercial Division Rule 8(a)), included concerns as to whether the sanctions found in Section 202.21 would be applicable due to the language of the rule stating counsel "shall" consult on a variety of issues prior to each conference.

Overly harsh sanctions were also raised in connection with §202.20-c – Responses and Objections to Document Requests (based upon Commercial Division Rule 11-e).

C. TONE OF RULES

Language used in some Rules was seen as unnecessary and even demeaning to experienced practitioners. One example is § 202.1 which advises counsel that it is important to be on time for scheduled appearances.

Comments also addressed §202.20-f and the requirement that counsel attest to the date, time and length of the in-person or telephonic conference held to discuss discovery disputes before resorting to court intervention. The rule requiring attorneys to actually time phone calls or personal discussions with opposing counsel was seen as unnecessary since attorneys are already required to attest to good faith efforts to resolve a discovery dispute in connection with a Motion to Preclude or Compel (CPLR 3105 and §202.7). Additional comments on §202.20-f included the inability to attempt discovery dispute resolution using email, a common practice when opposing counsel is not available for a phone call or personal meeting. One commenter indicated the inability to sign an affirmation of good faith as the new section requires attestation to the length of time and date of the phone call or personal meeting and does not permit attempts at resolution by email.

D. COMMENTS ON THE RULES, IN GENERAL

In addition to the above, some general comments included:

1. Lack of necessity for the rules in certain geographic areas of the state. These rules appear to be a statewide resolution to problems encountered in the downstate metropolitan counties
2. Issues facing rural practitioners including lack of access to broadband and cell phone service, the limited number of practicing attorneys and the number of aging attorneys with limited knowledge of or access to technology were also addressed.
3. The necessity of certain rules was also questioned as commenters felt they could work out their own discovery schedules and issues by communicating with other counsel and that they could do so on a timely basis without the threat of harsh sanctions for lack of strict compliance.

Finally, a series of general questions was posed in a poll administered during four forums conducted by this Committee. Not everyone who participated in the forum necessarily took part in the poll. The results of that poll are as follows:

- a) Overall, are you in favor of the Administrative Board's adoption of the New Rules?

Yes	16% (24 votes)
No	71% (105 votes)
No Opinion	13% (19 votes)
- b) What impact do you feel the New Rules will have on the efficient adjudication of cases?

Positive	14% (19 votes)
Negative	67% (92 votes)
No Impact	4% (7 votes)

Unsure 15% (20 votes)

- c) What impact do you think the New Rules will have on the cost of litigation in New York Civil Courts?

Reduce 5% (7 votes)

Increase 86% (126 votes)

No Change 3% (5 votes)

Unsure 6% (9 votes)

- d) What impact do you think the New Rules will have on access to justice for underserved populations?

Positive 3% (4 votes)

Negative 76% (113 votes)

No Impact 10% (15 votes)

Unsure 11% (16 votes)

- e) What impact do you think the New Rules will have on the practice of law in New York Civil Courts?

Positive 14% (21 votes)

Negative 66% (98 votes)

No Impact 3% (4 votes)

Unsure 17% (25 votes)

V. DISCOVERY RULES

The New Rules impose a number of changes concerning discovery. The Committee heard many comments on these rules. The clear feeling of numerous commenters on the subject is that these changes are not necessary and are frequently overly burdensome and costly. In addition, the “one size fits all” approach is seen as being extremely disconcerting to practitioners in areas of law where these rules were previously inapplicable and in cases where the claims are not large enough to warrant the additional costs.

One of the difficulties that was frequently brought up was that even though the application of these rules is frequently left to the discretion of the Court, discretion in procedural issues, unlike substantive issues, is frequently applied unevenly, and frankly often works to the disadvantage of the more vulnerable party.<sup>1</sup> While substantive discretion is very much needed in our system of justice, having discretion in procedural issues creates a lack of uniformity, and leaves attorneys and pro se litigants without a clear understanding of what is expected of them on a consistent basis. In the cited study, it is found that by applying discretion, which creates a lack of uniformity, the underrepresented are actually put at a greater disadvantage, and that clearly results in an impediment to access to justice. Procedural discretion is a “vulnerability amplifier.”

Another issue that constantly came up from the commenters was the issue of superfluosity. Throughout this discussion of discovery, it will be observed that a number of the new rules are already covered by the CPLR, or are in conflict with the CPLR. In those situations, the practitioner is put in a position requiring extra steps which results in extra costs to clients and further uncertainty.

The general feeling with regard to these various rules is that a great deal of additional work needs to be done to refine them in a way that will not create an adverse impact upon underrepresented litigants, and further will not act to increase the work required by lawyers and additional expense to clients which would, by its very nature, increase the number of people who will be financially excluded from our justice system.

A. §202.20 – INTERROGATORIES (based upon Commercial Division Rule 11-a)

The amendment to §202.20 creates a limitation of interrogatories “to 25 in number, including sub-parts, unless the Court orders otherwise.” In addition, this limitation applies to not only sub-parts but also to consolidated actions.

The intent of this Rule seems to be to mimic Federal Rule 33. In receiving comments from an extraordinary number of NYSBA members, it is clear that a general criticism of the rules is that Federal Rules are not appropriate in State Court cases. In addition, in this particular situation, the Federal Rules are not imitated because the Federal Rules differentiate between “discreet” sub-parts rather than just “sub-parts”. In Federal cases, follow up questions are permitted without counting them towards the number of interrogatories permitted, so long as the sub-parts are not “discreet.” In New York under the amended rules, that does not appear to be the case.<sup>2</sup>

While the purported purpose of this rule is to streamline litigation, making it more efficient, the limitations that are created may be unduly restrictive as they are in addition to the limitations in CPLR §3130 which indicates that, except in matrimonial actions, a party cannot serve Interrogatories and a Demand for Bill of Particulars under CPLR §3041. The CPLR already limits the scope of use of Interrogatories. Further, the rules under DRL 236(b)(4), the law governing matrimonial actions, may create a further contradiction.

In order to expand the number of interrogatories, one would require a Court Order. The Members and Sections that commented believe that it would be more appropriate to go to Court only in the event that there was a concern that the number of interrogatories was excessive, or that the content of information requested was not germane, or was intended to be abusive. In most cases, that is not going to be the case, and thus this rule would essentially create an additional step where the parties can usually agree without Court involvement. In the event that interrogatories are seen as being abusive, an attorney would certainly have the recourse of involving the Courts under CPLR §3103 by seeking a protective order.

The various commenters felt that the amendment additionally created a limitation deviating from the concept of broad discovery called for under CPLR §3101, and in addition created the additional burdens indicated above. The general tone was that these limitations were not necessary but in addition would create additional work for lawyers and greater expense to their clients. It was felt that the extra steps called for would add, in many cases, to the time necessary to prepare discovery and thus to the cost passed down to clients.

B. §202.20-a PRIVILEGE LOGS (based upon Commercial Division Rule 11-b)

The amendments to the provisions regarding privilege logs was also commented upon by the Membership. The general belief was that these amendments are superfluous as the provisions therein are generally covered by the CPLR. These new steps create additional burdens and uncertainties resulting in increased costs.

Sub-section (a) calls for the parties to “meet and confer at the outset of the case, and from time to time thereafter, to discuss the scope of the privilege review, the amount of information to be set out in the privilege log, the use of categories to reduce document by document logging, whether any categories of information may be excluded from the logging requirement...”. From the outset, there is a concern that this section is potentially in conflict with CPLR §3122(a) and (b) which essentially prescribes a document by document approach to privilege logs as opposed to this categorical approach. The rule calls for the shifting of costs to the party requiring a document by document log rather than a categorical one which clearly conflicts with CPLR §3122(b) and impinges on the rights of the party seeking the document by document log as called for by the CPLR. This penalty discourages the very activities called for by the CPLR. The new rule also calls for legal grounds for withholding documents, etc., all of which are stated in the CPLR as well. In order to withhold the document, it is already clear that there needs to be a showing of a legal reason for withholding the documents.

While §202.20-a purports to create greater efficiency in the litigation process, these amendments actually call for meetings between the parties. It is hard to expect that there would not be regular communication between litigating attorneys, and a determination as to whether they agree and/or disagree as to what will be logged and what should be deemed privileged. The commenters were clearly of the opinion that the sub-section was superfluous and increased lawyers’ workloads and expenses which inure to the clients.

§202.20-b calls for an agreement to be reached, and then to convert this into an Order rather than just a stipulation of the parties. The stipulation should not require the involvement of the Courts, unless of course there is disagreement, at which point it is very easy to involve the Courts by motion or otherwise.

In addition, the reference to certification by a “responsible attorney” was thought to be vague and overly narrow. Another comment was that there is no clear definition as to what is privileged, and there needed to be greater clarity relating thereto. Lastly, the necessity of logging work product after commencement of litigation or communications with litigation counsel after such comment was seen by many of the commenters as having no practical use. Essentially, the amendments to the rules with regard to privilege logs is superfluous and burdensome.

C. §202.11 DISCOVERY OF ELECTRONICALLY STORED INFORMATION FROM NON-PARTIES (based on Commercial Division Rule 11-c)

This rule appears to be an almost direct restatement of rules 3111 and 3122(d) of the CPLR. The appendix sets forth a number of suggestions, using the word “should”. It is not that these suggestions are bad, but they seem to be covered by CPLR §3122(d) and §3111. The additional rules are superfluous and burdensome.

CPLR §3122(d) indicates that absent a demand for original documents, copies can be provided and “the reasonable production expenses of a non-party witness shall be defrayed by the party seeking discovery”. This clearly obviates the necessity of an additional rule with regard to this.

The general consensus was that this is a burdensome and superfluous rule.

D. §202.20-b - LIMITATIONS OF DEPOSITIONS (based upon Commercial Division Rule 11-d) The limitations of depositions again were an issue of significant concern to members and Sections commenting. The amendment calls for a limitation to 10 depositions by a defendant or by third-party defendants and that the depositions are limited to 7 hours per deponent. The rule goes on to distinguish between fact witnesses as opposed to entity witnesses and further explains in sub-section (f) that, “for good cause the Court may alter the limits on the number of depositions or the duration of examination.”

Since there is a lack of clarity as to the standards as to what is “good cause,” the result may be anything but uniform, and considering the broad standards of CPLR §3101, may be prejudicial to the person seeking discovery. In addition, sub-paragraph (g) calls for a fall back to the CPLR. Clearly, it appears that the intent would be that the CPLR be followed, and it doesn’t appear that there is a necessity for an additional rule indicating that.

One of the concerns is that this limitation of depositions can be highly prejudicial in cases that are heavily document dependent, in employment cases where there is a need for vast quantities of information, or in cases where there are multiple parties, such as medical malpractice cases, where dividing up 7 hours among the various defendants, each of whom may have different concerns or questions, it unfair. Putting the onus on multiple defendants to seek court permission, in order to avoid the limits, is also unfair. The necessity of having to consult a Judge to ask for his or her blessing to expand on the depositions would create an additional expense. In contrast, in the event that a party feels that the number of depositions or the length of depositions is becoming abusive, a protective order can surely be sought. The result of having to go to Court every time you would like to have lengthier depositions or a greater number of depositions will create an additional burden on the Court as well as the litigants.

Traditionally, where broad discovery is called for, it would seem contradictory to have to go to a Judge to obtain an Order allowing you to discover information that is essential to your ability to litigate a claim. It also appears that the affected population may include a vulnerable population, and it is clear that they would not have the abilities nor the wherewithal to afford the extra steps. It was the position of most commenters that this limitation is uncalled for in the State Courts and the Rule was generally opposed.

E. §202.20-e ADHERENCE TO DISCOVERY SCHEDULE (based upon Commercial Division Rule 13(a) and (b)) This particular rule calls for the strict compliance with discovery obligations by the date set forth in a Scheduling Order. This is not unlike what is required by any Order. Upon the issuance of an Order, which in the case of Scheduling Orders, is normally stipulated to, the parties are required to abide by said Order unless an extension is granted.

In the case of the new rules, the discovery deadlines shall be made as soon as practical. Sometimes those deadlines cannot be met because of exigent circumstances. However, the new rule indicates that “non-compliance with the Order may result in imposition of appropriate sanction against the party, or for relief pursuant to CPLR 3126.” It is thought that these sanctions could be overly harsh, and unevenly imposed.

In addition, §202.20-e(b) provision of preclusion for failure to produce certain documents is a penalty that the Court can already impose under CPLR 3126. This is again nothing new. Based upon the comments made, this section appears to be superfluous, and its sanctions overly harsh.

F. §202.20-c – RESPONSES AND OBJECTIONS TO DOCUMENT REQUESTS (based upon Commercial Division Rule 11-e) §202.20-c (a) and (b) certainly have merit; however, these provisions are already covered under the CPLR. A quick review of CPLR 3122a indicates what is required in the event that a party or a person is served with a notice or Subpoena Duces Tecum if there is an objection to the demand. CPLR 3122a (2) becomes more specific with regard to medical providers. It would appear that sub-sections (a) and (b) of the new rule are superfluous, as the requirements set forth are already covered under CPLR 3122a.

Subsection (c) of the rule states that “In each response, the responding party shall verify, for each individual request: (i) whether the production of documents in its possession, custody or control and that are responsive to the individual requests, as propounded or modified, is complete; or (ii) that there are no documents in its possession, custody or control that are responsive to the individual request as propounded or modified.” Verification is a specific term within the CPLR, with its requirements set forth in CPLR 3020. It is specified for certain types of pleadings, but until the adoption of this rule, there has never been a requirement of verification of responses to discovery. Clearly, to be required to prepare a separate verification for each individual request will create a significant burden. This is especially true considering the continuing obligation to provide modifications or supplements as is necessary and will presumably call for even more verifications.

The encouragement to use efficient means to review documents set forth in subsection (e) is clearly superfluous.

The lack of clarity with the regard to the use of “good cause” in subsection (f) leaves questions as to whether documents that were not revealed because of exigent factors will be able to be used at trial, though produced at the earliest convenience of the responding party.

Clearly, there seems to be a bit of a disconnect with regard to this rule and the CPLR particularly in connection with subparagraph (c), and a lack of clarity or superfluosity with regard to other aspects of this rule.

G. §202.20-d DEPOSITIONS OF ENTITIES IDENTIFICATION OF MATTERS
(based upon Commercial Division Rule 11-f) This rule sets out provisions with regard to notices to take depositions or subpoenas. The rule essentially reiterates much of what is addressed by the CPLR throughout Article 23. There are requirements of particularity, and one of the concerns would be that this particularity may in fact limit questioning on a broad scale as is encouraged by the CPLR.

Based upon all of the information that is provided in Article 23, it would appear that this rule is superfluous and liable to create confusion.

H. §202.20-f DISCLOSURE DISPUTES (based upon Commercial Division Rule 14)

In this rule, the Court again encourages parties to resolve their disputes informally. However, the concern is that there is a limitation that conflicts with the CPLR. While the moving party in a discovery dispute is required to provide an affidavit indicating that a good faith effort was made to resolve the problems that exist, the absence of such a showing would deprive a moving party from actually having his or her motion heard.

This appears to be directly contrary to the CPLR. While motions should always have a clear basis in law, to require the Court's blessing to bring the motion based upon interactions between the parties is a clear limitation of the moving party's rights under the CPLR.

I. §202.20-g RULINGS AT DISCLOSURE CONFERENCES (based upon Commercial Division Rule 14-a)

Rule 14-a sets forth a procedure for all resolutions at a Judicial Conference to be reduced to an Order. While it is good practice to reduce all of the determinations, stipulations and rulings at a disclosure conference to writing, it would seem that a simple stipulation, or a less formalized procedure could be followed very effectively as it has been followed for many years in the State Courts. It would appear that based upon a lack of need to so formalize the procedure, that this rule is superfluous.

VI. MOTION PAPERS

The New Rules contain a number of provisions affecting motion practice. It should be noted that none of these rules, based upon Commercial Division Rules 16-19, was recommended by the OCA Advisory Committee on Civil Practice. We heard a number of comments regarding the difficulty that these rules present for all practitioners, but especially for those in small or solo practices and those in rural areas.

A. §202.8-a Motion in General (based upon Commercial Division Rule 16)

This motion rule requires that the movant must submit “copies of all pleadings and other documents as required by the CPLR and as necessary for any informed decision on the motion”. The Rule also requires that the proponent set forth “the exact relief sought.” CPLR 2214(a) currently addresses the notice of motion. The CPLR does not require a description of “the exact relief sought” but just sets forth that the notice shall specify “the relief demanded and the grounds therefor.”

This particular section is contrary to the statute in three places. First, it requires the notice of motion to specify the “exact relief sought,” even where the motion papers are explicit as to all relief. Second, it describes additional papers “as necessary for an informed decision on the motion.” That elastic language seems to support the submission of all sorts of documentation, in addition to all of the pleadings for each and every motion. Where the court requires hard copies, this means including what could be voluminous papers, despite the availability of these documents in the electronic file. This does not seem to be an amendment that will make things more efficient.

This rule addresses an additional requirement for attorneys. It requires proposed orders to be submitted with motions, and even describes the type of motion for which the order should be supplied as “etc.” (202.8-a(b)). Except in the case of ex parte motions, preparing a proposed order at the outset of a motion is usually superfluous. Proposed orders, after decision, will be aired with all parties, and will recite papers submitted in support and in opposition, and the appearance of parties. This cannot be known at the time the motion is made. Requiring a proposed order at the outset is extremely inefficient.

This rule also limits adjournments. (202.8-a(c)) Adjournments, of course, are sought frequently by parties who have time constraints on other matters, unrelated personnel or personal issues that require adjournments, and negotiations that have begun to hold promise. All of these are a genuine and good reasons to adjourn motions, without having any limitations on them. If adjournments become too cumbersome for the court, the court may limit them on a case by case basis.

B. §202.8-b Length of Papers (based upon Commercial Division Rule 17)

This rule would limit papers to certain word counts. The Court seeks to limit submissions to 7,000 words and reply affidavits to 4,200 words. We heard comments that the rule itself creates confusion in that it is not always clear whether papers are “in chief” or “in response,” in the case of, for example, a cross-motion. In addition, not all word processing programs count words in the same way. The rule does not specify whether captions, tables of cases, tables of contents, etc. are included in the word count.

We also heard comments regarding the efficacy of a page count in some complicated motions. While it is admirable to have some reasonable page and word limits, some motions, involving multiple causes of action or multiple parties may clearly require more pages and words, in order to do justice to a full recitation of the facts, the law and appropriate argument.

We also heard that the time (and money) it takes to either seek permission for a longer submission or to cut the document down to the appropriate size, may be extensive, and does not advance the assistance to the court or be fair to the client.

C. §202.8-c Sur-Reply and Post Submission Papers (based upon Commercial Division Rule 18) This rule is a new addition to civil practice and it is debatable as to whether it resolves an issue or creates one. CPLR 2214 creates no right to sur-reply, and such a submission would be considered only if the court so rules.

D. §202.8-d Orders to Show Cause (based upon Commercial Division Rule 19) This rule establishes a new standard indicating that orders to show cause can only be brought when there is “genuine urgency, a stay is required or a statute mandates so proceeding.” This of course, would limit the grounds upon which orders to show cause can be brought. CPLR 2214(d) says that “The Court in a proper case may grant an order to show cause.” This rule would infringe upon that statutory grant, as to a proper case and requires that the proper case have genuine urgency. This rule ignores those circumstances where an order to show cause is appropriate because of the non-represented status of certain parties, where the relief sought will not be opposed, and for other good causes.

E. §202.5(a)(1) and (2) Form of Papers (based upon Commercial Division Rule 6(a)). This rule imposes “bookmarking” (“providing a listing of the document’s contents and facilitating easy navigation by the reader within the document”) on all electronic documents in excess of 4500 words. It is true that “bookmarking” may make navigation for the reader easier, and for those attorneys and litigants that use pdf creation software and have either staff or attorney facility with bookmarking, bookmarking may not be onerous. However, it ignores the fact that many attorneys, as well as pro se litigants, do not use pdf software. Instead, they create the fileable documents by use of a scanner. For these attorneys and litigants, bookmarking is impossible. Even some attorneys who do have pdf creation software, may have neither the staff nor the attorney ability to provide bookmarking. This rule creates a hardship for many solo and small firm attorneys as well as rural attorneys.

VII. SUMMARY JUDGMENT: STATEMENT OF MATERIAL FACTS

New rule §202.8-g, based upon Commercial Division Rule 19-a, imposes additional requirements upon the movant in any motion for summary judgment (other than a motion under CPLR 3213 where the motion is in lieu of complaint) and also imposes additional requirements upon any party opposing the motion for summary judgment. Specifically, the movant is required to annex to the notice of motion a “separate, short and concise statement, in numbered paragraphs, of the material facts as to which the moving party contends there is no genuine issue of fact,” and each such numbered paragraph must be followed “by citation to evidence submitted in support of...that motion.”<sup>1</sup> The opponent is required to include a “correspondingly numbered paragraph” for each of the movant’s numbered paragraphs, and “additional paragraphs containing a separate short and concise statement of the material facts as to which it is contended that there exists a genuine issue to be tried.” Each such paragraph or statement must also be followed by “citation to evidence submitted in...opposition to the motion.”<sup>2</sup> Failure of the opponent to do so is severe: Any numbered paragraph which is not “specifically controverted” is deemed admitted, presumably for the entire action, not just the motion.<sup>3</sup>

It should be noted at the outset that §202.8-g differs from Commercial Division Rule 19-a in one important respect: Rule 19-a provides that the requirements of the rule are imposed only when “the court may direct.” §202.8-g applies to all summary judgment motions. The only entities which commented on Rule 19-a, the New York City Bar Association and the New York State Bar Association CPLR Committee, both commented that any such provision should not be mandatory, but instead should be limited to the judge’s discretion.

During the four forums conducted by the New York State Bar Association, there were a considerable number of comments regarding §202.8-g. Most of the comments were in opposition to the rule based upon the additional attorney time (and client cost) that compliance would impose. Even where some comments were in favor of having a “statement of material facts,” they were always prefaced by “in the right case.” In fact, one commenter, perhaps unaware of the mandatory nature of §202.8-g, spoke about how well the rule worked in the Commercial Division (where his practice was based) because the rule left whether or not to require it to the judge’s discretion. The New York City Bar Association’s comments also included that in the experience of its members within the Commercial Division, the rule was rarely imposed by some of the judges, recognizing that the rule may have limited benefit to the judges while adding substantial cost.

Imposition of this rule, in addition to requiring papers other than those specified in CPLR 3212(b), will have a significant impact on the law of summary judgment as set forth in CPLR 3212 and relevant case law. The rule's impact is set explained below.

A. Effect on opponent's defense based upon timeliness

Where the motion for summary judgment is beyond the time limit provided by CPLR 3212(a), because the motion is made after the expiration of the period 120 days after the filing of the note of issue, or some other time period set by the court, the opponent may oppose the motion on timeliness grounds, without opposing the motion on the merits. Nonetheless, under a strict reading of §202.8-g(c), such opposing party would have been deemed to have admitted each and every numbered statement made by the movant. §202.8-g(c) does not limit the imposition of such admission to the motion. Thus, the rule would require the opponent to also respond on the merits, not only by responding to the statement of material facts, but also with all admissible proof, in that the opposing statement must cite to the proof submitted by the opposing party. By failing to do so, the opposing party, even if prevailing by the denial of summary judgment on timeliness grounds, would suffer an admission of each and every fact set forth in the movant's statement of material facts. The time limit imposed by CPLR 3212(a) was to prevent the heavy burden of opposing a motion for summary judgment while preparing for trial. §202.8-g(b), (c) and (d) would negate that.

B. Effect on opponent's defense based upon failure of movant to meet its burden

The party moving for summary judgment bears a burden to demonstrate a prima facie showing entitling a judgment as a matter of law. If the movant fails to do so, summary judgment must be denied.<sup>4</sup> An opponent may choose not to put in any proof in opposition, and still prevail based upon the movant's failure to meet its burden.<sup>5</sup> However, under §202.8-g(c), such opposing party would have been deemed to have admitted each and every numbered statement made by the movant. §202.8-g(c) does not limit such admission to the motion. Thus, the rule would require the opponent to respond on the merits, not only by responding to the statement of material facts, but also with all admissible proof, in that the opposing statement must cite to the proof submitted by the opposing party. By failing to do so, the opposing party, even if prevailing by the denial of summary judgment on movant's failure to meet its burden, would suffer an admission of each and every fact set forth in the movant's statement of material facts.

C. Effect on opposition based upon CPLR 3212(f)

Where facts to oppose a motion for summary judgment are in the control of the moving party, and the opposing party has not had a fair opportunity to discover the facts, the court may either deny summary judgment or may order a continuance to permit disclosure under CPLR 3212(f). However, the granting of relief under CPLR 3212(f) does not address the deemed admission contained in §202.8-g(c). §202.8-g(c) provides for deemed admission as to each and every paragraph in the movant's statement of material facts unanswered by the opponent. There is no stated exception where summary judgment is denied based upon a CPLR 3212(f) defense.

D. Issues regarding materiality

In order to meet its burden, the movant must demonstrate the lack of a genuine issue of material regarding each element of the claim or defense, or must demonstrate that the opponent lacks an element of its claim or defense as a matter of law. Motions for summary judgment often concern disputes over what constitutes the material facts necessary for the claim or defense.<sup>6</sup> Nowhere in §202.8-g is this addressed. For example, suppose that the movant's statement of material facts leaves out one of the elements of the defense which is the basis for the summary judgment motion. Adequate papers in opposition to the motion under CPLR 3212 would simply point out the missing element, and would include, perhaps, some proof in evidentiary form that there is a dispute as to the missing element. It would not be necessary for the opposing party to introduce proof to show a dispute as to other material facts, the absence of one element is fatal. Yet §202.8-g(c) would militate in favor of a longer set of opposition papers, opposing each and every paragraph in the movant's statement of material facts, as the absence of such proof and response would be deemed an admission. Similarly, if some of the facts listed by the movant are not material, the opposing party may not wish to go to the expense of demonstrating an issue of fact, yet does not wish to admit them either. §202.8-g would not streamline the process, in such a case, but would instead make it more complicated and confusing.

E. Issues regarding expert opinion and other testimony

Some motions for summary judgment require reliance upon expert affidavits to support and oppose the motion. In such cases, the opinions of the experts speak for themselves. Translating them into statements of material facts in any manner other than by using the expert opinions verbatim can often result in disputes over whether the resulting statement is a fair representation of what the expert has stated. Even where the affiant or deponent is not an expert, the statement of facts concerning their affidavit or testimony may deviate from what is actually said. The statements contemplated by §202.8-g are written by attorneys who have neither the expertise (in the case of experts) nor first-hand knowledge; they are hearsay. The statements by the lawyers may be supported by actual evidence, but the statements as worded by the lawyers are not admissible evidence. To give them evidentiary value by having them “deemed admitted” as is required by §202.8-g(c) is contrary to the rules of evidence.

CPLR 3212(b) and hundreds of cases<sup>7</sup> make it quite clear that affidavits must be from persons with actual knowledge of the matter presented, not lawyers. Yet the statements in §202.8-g are from lawyers, and they are elevated to admissible evidence as a deemed admission whenever they are not properly responded to by the opponent.

F. Evidence related to physical injuries

The injuries in personal injury actions are often the subject of summary judgment motions. For example, there are summary judgment motions on “serious injury threshold” in many (if not most) motor vehicle cases. There may be hundreds of facts concerning prior injuries and conditions, treatment immediately given, treatment given at a later time, prognosis, limitations on the plaintiff’s ability to engage in normal daily functions, etc. Each of these facts is material to the question of threshold and setting them forth in numbered paragraphs in addition to medical records, medical reports and physician affidavits, is difficult, cumbersome and burdensome. The court will have to review all of the records, reports and affidavits in order to determine whether there is a serious injury as a result of the accident, in any event. It is questionable whether the required statements are helpful at all, but it is unquestionable that they will be time consuming and expensive. Applying this rule to all cases involving personal injuries is not beneficial to the court, and it is an undue burden to the attorneys.

G. Inadvertence and abuse

A party opposing the motion for summary judgment may inadvertently fail to address one or more numbered paragraphs in the movant’s statement of material fact, while submitting adequate proof in admissible form to contradict the fact stated. Nonetheless, under §202.8-g(c) that fact is deemed admitted. Even if such admission does not result in the granting of the motion, the admission remains throughout the case and may be of serious consequence. And, there is no escape hatch. While CPLR 3123, governing Notices to Admit, allows for the correction of any admission,<sup>8</sup> §202.8-g does not.

This seemingly invites abuse. While §202.8-g(a) contemplates “a short and concise” statement, there is no limit to the number of “numbered paragraphs” included, and each such statement must be followed by citation to evidence submitted. Conclusory statements are not appropriately the basis for summary judgment<sup>9</sup>; it is likely that the statements of material fact will be more specific and detailed than “short and concise.” The more detailed and lengthy the statement of material fact, the greater burden placed on the opponent and the greater opportunity of inadvertent failure to properly address each numbered paragraph. The rule invites gamesmanship.

The one instance where §202.8-g could be effective is where the movant or the opponent seeks relief under CPLR 3212(g). This section permits the court, when denying or granting in part the motion for summary judgment, to limit the issues for trial. The use of CPLR 3212(g) is entirely discretionary; initiative by one of the parties is helpful, but not required.<sup>10</sup> In cases where one of the parties has requested relief under CPLR 3212(g) or where the court is denying or granting in part summary judgment and is contemplating granting relief under CPLR 3212(g), the use of the rule in §202.8-g may be effective and appropriate. Its use should be limited to that circumstance. It should not be required in every motion for summary judgment.

VIII. TRIAL AND SETTLEMENT

A. §202.34 PRE MARKING EXHIBITS (based upon Commercial Division Rule 28).

This Rule provides for the pre-marking of exhibits at trial. Counsel are required to consult prior to trial and attempt to agree upon exhibits that will be admitted on consent. All exhibits then must be pre-marked. Exhibits not consented to are marked for identification only.

Commercial division cases normally involve a great number of exhibits, particularly documentary exhibits (contracts, correspondence, emails, etc.). In light of the number of exhibits normally involved in such cases, Commercial Division Rule 28, requiring the attorneys to consult and take affirmative steps to pre-mark exhibits, makes sense.

In most other types of civil cases, there are normally fewer exhibits. In routine civil trials (slip and fall, automobile accident cases, etc.) the handling, marking and introduction of exhibits is handling relatively seamlessly at trial. Of course, the parties are always free to consult and consent to the introduction of certain exhibits. And trial judges have the inherent authority to direct the pre-marking of exhibits in appropriate cases involving significant numbers of exhibits.

But in light of the lack of evidence that marking exhibits at trial interferes with the efficient administration of most civil trials, there does not seem to be a need to enact a rule that requires counsel to do extra work in every civil trial. The requirements of this Rule, especially considered in connection with the requirements of Section 202.20-h(b) (requirement of submission of a indexed binder of the trial exhibits before trial), seems unnecessary.

B. §202.20-h PRE TRIAL MEMOS (based upon Commercial Division Rule 31(a), (b) and (c)). This Rule requires each party to submit a pre-trial memorandum, exhibit book and request for jury instructions before or at the beginning of every civil trial. Subdivision (a) requires counsel to submit a pre-trial memorandum no longer than 25 pages at the pre-trial conference. Subdivision (b) requires that counsel submit an indexed binder of trial exhibits for the court's use, with copies for each other attorney and a binder of the originals for witnesses to use. Subdivision (c) requires that counsel submit requests to charge on the first day of trial.

The requirement that counsel submit a pre-trial memorandum is new. The prior civil Rule (§ 202.35(c)) allowed the court to order trial memoranda, but did not mandate them as the new Rule does. In the majority of civil trials such memoranda are not requested or provided. By the time of trial, the trial judge has often presided over the case for years, through multiple conferences and motions. In light of the fact that pre-trial memorandum are rarely requested, it appears that trial judges believe themselves to be sufficiently knowledgeable about the cases without the need for memorandum. A rule which requires such memorandum simply requires lawyers to do unnecessary work at their clients' expense.

As discussed above, the requirements that exhibits be pre-marked and an indexed binder be provided to the court, other counsel and the witnesses is, again, generating additional work for attorneys that seems unnecessary in the vast majority of civil cases.

C. §202.37 SCHEDULING OF WITNESSES (based upon Commercial Division Rule 32). This Rule requires that at the commencement of the trial the attorneys must identify in writing the witnesses they intend to call, the order in which they shall testify, and the estimated length of their testimony. The Rule provides that a court may permit testimony from a witness who is not identified on the witness list, but only “for good cause shown and in the absence of substantial prejudice.” The Rule further provides that the estimates of the length of testimony provided are advisory only, and that the court may permit testimony beyond the time. The Rule does not address whether the party may call witnesses in an order different than that listed in the schedule.

Through the discovery process in civil cases, the parties are obligated to identify potential witnesses. Where a case is tried in front of a jury, the normal voir dire process includes announcing the names of the witnesses to the jurors. Thus, the identify of the witnesses is well-known to the parties before most trials begin. Nothing in the CPLR requires the parties to identify the specific witnesses who will be called at trial and in what order. The witnesses an attorney will call, and their order, is not always known by that attorney at the beginning of the trial. Sometimes a particular witness’s testimony is deemed to be unnecessary by the lawyer based on the testimony that has preceded it. Some witnesses testify longer or shorter than expected. Some witnesses have limited windows of availability. Thus, a mandatory Rule requiring parties to identify in writing the witnesses they intend to call, and the order in which they testify, may pose some issues in application, particularly where that Rule does not explicitly provide that the court may excuse a change in the order of the witnesses.

D. §202.20-i TESTIMONY BY AFFIDAVIT (based upon Commercial Division Rule 32-a). This Rule provides that in a non-jury trial, a court may “require” that a party submit the direct testimony of its witnesses in affidavit form. The Rule provides that the opposing party shall have the right to object to statements in the affidavit as if the statements had been made orally in open court. The Rule further provides that the submission of direct testimony in affidavit form “shall not affect any right to conduct cross-examination or re-direct examination of the witness.”

Although there are times when the submission of direct testimony in a non-jury trial or hearing by affidavit may make sense, the Rule provides that it is at the court’s direction, without input of the offering attorney. In other words, the Rule allows the court to require the submission of testimony by affidavit, even over the objection of the offering party. There are times when the offering party may want the judge to see and hear from the witness directly in order to aid in its assessment of credibility. In addition, live testimony by a witness seems more likely to reflect the witness’s own recollections and testimony than an affidavit, which naturally will be crafted with counsel’s input. A Rule that allows the court to request the testimony be submitted in affidavit form, but gives the ultimate decision to the party offering the testimony, would be preferable.

IX. CONCLUSION

Based upon comments received, there are significant issues with many of the new rules. Our final report will include specific language to effect necessary changes. These will be significant, and the Task Force continues to urge for a stay of enforcement until such changes can be effected.

Report of the Advisory Committee on Civil Practice on the Commercial Division Rules

to the Chief Judge of the Courts of the State of New York

July 2018

Introduction

This Committee has been charged with evaluating the Commercial Division Rules and Amendments and recommending which should be adopted broadly throughout our civil courts, with the goal of streamlining civil litigation, improving efficiency, and reducing litigation costs.

The Committee's recommendations are based on the members' broad collective experience in practicing throughout the State representing clients in all types of civil litigation including administrative, commercial disputes, civil rights, class actions, construction, consumer debt, contracts, employment, foreclosures, insurance coverage, landlords and tenants, land-use, property disputes, medical malpractice, personal injury, and other types of intentional and negligent tort litigation.

Additionally, Committee members met with a number of judges and court personnel to gain the courts' perspective.

After careful consideration, the Committee recommends adopting broadly, or in principle, the following Commercial Division Rules:

Rule 3(a) Appointment of a court-annexed mediator, as amended.

Rule 3(b) Availability of a settlement conference before a judge not assigned to the case.

Rule 11-a Limitations on interrogatories.

Rule 11-b Privilege logs, in part.

Rule 11-d Limitations on depositions.

Rule 11-e Responses and objections to document requests, as amended.

Rule 19-a Statement of material facts for summary judgment motions.

Rule 20 Temporary restraining orders.

Rule 34 Staggered Court Appearances

The Commercial Division Rules were thoughtfully drafted and have continually evolved to help streamline litigation and reduce costs in a complex area of practice.

As effective as the rules have been in the commercial parts, it is the sense of the Committee that wholesale adoption of the rules statewide is not warranted. Many of the general rules are already in place in one form or another. Some of the specific rules do not lend themselves to broader application as they may well add to the costs of litigation and/or place an added burden on the already strained resources of the courts. Further, statewide application of some rules would be inappropriate given the disparate caseloads among the various courts.

In addition, the Committee believes that some of the rules, however effective they are in the commercial divisions, would be unworkable in the many cases where the amount at issue may not justify the more attorney-intensive efforts that are expended in large commercial cases.

A general recommendation of the Committee, as noted under Rule 7, is that the court consider making greater use of the New York State Courts Electronic Filing System (NYSCEF) to decrease in-court appearances for pro-forma matters, thus allowing the resources of the courts to be directed toward matters in dispute or instances of non-compliance. The Committee also urges the adoption of mandatory e-filing in all cases throughout the State.

The Committee believes that adoption of some of its proposals would require amendments to the CPLR. In most instances, however, adoption of new or revised uniform rules or a change in administrative practice would be sufficient to implement the proposed rule.

Finally, even though many of the Commercial Division rules have not been recommended for adoption, the Committee has found that a thorough analysis of those rules has been a useful way of reviewing the litigation process as a whole and has generated reconsideration of many long-standing assumptions about how cases should be handled in the court system. This review has resulted in several recommendations that do not exactly parrot the Commercial Division Rules, but nonetheless follow the spirit of those Rules.

Below is the Committee's analysis of each Rule.

RULE 1 - Appearance by Counsel with Knowledge and Authority

This Rule requires counsel who appear at conferences to be fully familiar with the case and fully authorized to enter into substantive and procedural agreements on behalf of their clients.

The Committee agrees that counsel who appear at conferences should be familiar with the issues anticipated to be addressed at the conference, including pending motions, and that counsel should be on time for all scheduled appearances. No rule change is required since such language is already incorporated in most conference orders.

RULE 2 - Settlements and Discontinuances

This Rule requires attorneys to inform the court of the settlement or discontinuance of an action. It provides that notice must be given “immediately” to the clerk of the part and to the judge’s chambers. The Committee does not recommend adoption of this rule.

The Committee agrees that attorneys should immediately notify the part clerk that a case has settled, or an issue is resolved, in instances where the matter is actively before the court such as a pending motion or a trial date.

In most other instances the filing of a stipulation of discontinuance is sufficient and no purpose would be served by routinely notifying a part clerk that a matter has settled.

RULE 3 - Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR); Settlement Conference Before a Justice Other Than the Justice Assigned to the Case

This Rule provides that a judge may direct, or counsel may request, the appointment of an uncompensated mediator. Similarly, it allows counsel for all parties to stipulate to having the case determined by a summary jury trial. The Committee recommends adoption of Paragraph (a), with a minor amendment, as follows:

(a) At any stage of the matter, the court may [direct] advise or counsel may seek the appointment of a court-annexed mediator for the purpose of mediating a resolution of all or some of the issues presented in the litigation. Additionally, counsel for all parties may stipulate to having the case determined by a summary jury trial pursuant to any applicable local rules or, in the absence of a controlling local rule, with permission of the court.

The Committee recommends adoption of Paragraph (b) of this rule, which states that counsel can request a settlement conference before another judge who is not the judge assigned to the case. If another judge is available, this does not seem to create serious problems, though in some downstate counties there may not be the resources available.

The Committee also recommends that greater use be made of experienced attorneys as court-approved mediators who would be modestly compensated for their time by the parties.

RULE 4 – Electronic Submission of Papers

This Rule is divided into two parts. Subdivision (a) deals with papers sent by fax. The Committee favors use of electronic communications rather than facsimile and does not support the rule's adoption.

Subdivision (b) deals with methods of communication in cases where papers are not filed by electronic means. It gives the court discretion to permit electronic communications between counsel as well as between counsel and the court.

The Committee believes that counsel can decide for themselves how they communicate with each other. There is no need for judicial direction. As for communications with the court, the Committee believes that judges can direct the method or methods to be used without the necessity of a rule. Many state court judges already encourage counsel to communicate with the court through email. The Committee strongly supports greater use of electronic communications with the court and urges judges to voluntarily adopt that practice.

RULE 5 – Information on Cases

This Rule is applicable only in the First and Second Departments. It provides that the schedule of court appearances and decisions can be found on the court system's website. It concludes by providing that where circumstances require, notice will be furnished directly by the court's chambers. This last sentence implies that it is the responsibility of the attorneys to follow the case on the court's website, as notice of events requiring a court appearance will be given only in limited circumstances. However, the rule does not give any specific direction to attorneys.

The Committee does not recommend adoption of this rule, but the Committee nonetheless believes that an on-line notice of the status of the action, including the status of pending motions, would be useful to the practice.

RULE 6 – Form of Papers

This Rule deals with the form of papers. The Committee believes that there is no problem within the court system with regard to papers and their form, and it would not adopt this Rule. There already are rules that seem to work well (See, for example, CPLR 2101 and Section 130-1.1-a of the Rules of the Chief Administrator).

There is an additional requirement imposed by this rule - - electronically filed memoranda and “where appropriate” affidavits and affirmations must be bookmarked to help the court. This is useful in long, complex documents, which are often submitted in cases in the Commercial Division. However, documents submitted elsewhere in the court system are often simple and straightforward. Bookmarking would constitute a burden on the attorneys with little or no benefit. Thus, the requirement of bookmarking these documents should not be imposed beyond the Commercial Division.

RULE 7 - Preliminary Conference; Request

This Rule sets times within which to hold a preliminary conference. Many preliminary conferences throughout the State are held in hallways or packed courtrooms where forms are filled out by counsel and handed in to a clerk to be later “So Ordered.” Although courts often provide counsel with the opportunity to fill out a preliminary conference order ahead of time and file it with the court instead of appearing, it is our experience that most lawyers do not utilize that option.

It is our recommendation that the courts utilize NYSCEF and other technology to avoid in-court appearances for “pro forma” matters such as setting discovery dates or to report that discovery is proceeding on schedule.

As an example, in the Motor Vehicle Part in Manhattan, the preliminary conference order is issued via NYSCEF after a request for judicial intervention has been filed. The order sets forth discovery dates based on preset criteria. This process obviates the need for a court appearance except in those cases where there is a dispute requiring court intervention.

Similarly, counsel should be required to e-file a statement as to whether discovery is proceeding per the scheduling order, to obviate the need for an in-court conference where there is no dispute or non-compliance.

It is further our recommendation that, in overseeing discovery, the resources of the court be directed toward those cases where there are disputes or noncompliance with a previous order.

RULE 8 - Consultation Prior to Preliminary and Compliance Conferences

This Rule requires counsel for all parties to confer prior to a preliminary or compliance conference about resolution of the case; discovery; alternative dispute resolution; voluntary, informal exchange of information; and issues of electronic discovery.

It is the opinion of the Committee that this rule is not necessary in the majority of civil cases where the issues can be addressed expeditiously at the conference, or through the adoption of a court-approved scheduling form that obviates the need for an in-person preliminary conference.

RULE 9 – Accelerated Adjudication Actions

Rule 9 incorporates a number of unrelated concepts into a package of accelerated adjudication procedures available on written consent of the parties in any action pending in the Commercial Division. As written, these procedures and practices must be adopted in their entirety, although there is no explicit prohibition on the parties by written consent adopting some part of these procedures.

Rule 9(a) provides for the adoption of the accelerated adjudication procedures by written consent in any action that qualifies for Commercial Division jurisdiction other than class actions brought under CPLR Article 9. Rule 9(b) sets a nine-month period for the action to be ready for trial, measured from the date of filing of a request for judicial intervention.

Rule 9(c) states that in any action governed by Rule 9, the parties are deemed to have “irrevocably waived” objections based on lack of personal jurisdiction or forum non conveniens, trial by jury, punitive or exemplary damages, interlocutory appeals, and discovery, except as agreed or as provided in Rule 9(c)(5). The discovery limitations are quantitative, such as seven interrogatories, five requests to admit, and seven depositions per side limited to seven hours each. Document discovery is limited to documents relevant to a claim or defense in the action and restricted by time frame and subject. Rule 9(d) sets forth procedures for electronic discovery that are applicable unless otherwise agreed. These include providing documents in searchable form and using a narrowly tailored list of custodians. Rule 9(d) also includes a proportionality limitation, stating that the court will deny disproportionate discovery or condition such discovery on the party seeking that discovery advancing its additional cost.

There is no express limitation in Rule 9 on when an agreement for accelerated adjudication may be entered into. Theoretically, such a provision could be a term unknowingly agreed to by one of the parties to a contract that is later the subject of litigation. Particularly where there is a large disparity in bargaining power, requiring acceptance of accelerated adjudication and consequent waiver of jury trial, jurisdictional defenses, punitive damages, and interlocutory appeal can fundamentally change the opportunity of a party to retain historic and constitutional safeguards on their legal rights. To reduce this risk, the Committee recommends that the option to proceed on an accelerated adjudication track should only be made available after an action is commenced.

The Committee understands, from anecdotal evidence, that this procedure is rarely, if ever, used. A voluntary package of devices intended to simplify the judicial process and reduce costs is salutary but the risk is that important rights may be sacrificed if accelerated adjudication is imposed on a party from the outset, or before the disadvantages are fully appreciated. The Committee does not believe that general adoption of Rule 9 would be beneficial at this time.

RULE 10- Submission of Information; Certification Relating to Alternative Dispute Resolution

This Rule adds to the submissions at the preliminary conference, a certification that counsel have discussed with their client the ADR opportunities and a statement as to whether they are willing to pursue mediation at some point in the litigation. The Committee believes that such a requirement invades the attorney-client relationship and therefore does not recommend adoption of the rule.

RULE 11 - Discovery

This Rule sets forth certain requirements for the contents of the preliminary conference order to be issued after the preliminary conference. In particular, the rule requires that the preliminary conference order contain specific provisions about the early disposition of the case; a comprehensive schedule for disclosure, motion practice, compliance conference, filing of note of issue, pretrial conference and trial; and any limitations on interrogatories and other discovery. The rule also requires the court to determine whether discovery will be stayed pending the determination of any dispositive motion.

The Committee does not recommend adoption of this rule. The Uniform Civil Rules already contain detailed requirements for preliminary conferences, see Uniform Rule § 202.12, which for the most part duplicate the provisions in this Commercial Division Rule. The Uniform Civil Rules also require the court to make a written order, or otherwise record the directions of the court and stipulations of counsel, following the conference. See § 202.12(d). Adoption of Commercial Division Rule 11 would therefore not significantly alter current practice in other courts or promote efficiency. In addition, as the reference in the rule itself indicates, the court already determines, pursuant to CPLR 3214(b), whether discovery will be stayed pending the determination of any dispositive motion.

RULE 11-a – Interrogatories

This Rule sets forth presumptive limitations on interrogatories. Specifically, interrogatories are limited to twenty-five (25) in number, including subparts, "unless another limit is specified in the preliminary conference order." The rule also limits interrogatories to certain topics, such as the names of witnesses with knowledge of information material and necessary to the subject matter of the action; computation of each category of damage alleged; and the existence, custodian, location and general description of material and necessary documents. Interrogatories seeking information not specified in the rule are permitted only on consent of the parties or by order of the court, for good cause shown. Finally, the rule permits claims and contention interrogatories thirty (30) days before the close of discovery, unless the court orders otherwise.

The Committee believes that the presumptive limitations set forth in this rule on the number and content of interrogatories would result in increased efficiency and streamlined litigation, and should be adopted. There are currently no such limitations in CPLR 3103, which provides only that, except in matrimonial actions, a party cannot both serve interrogatories and demand a bill of particulars under CPLR 3041; and that, in personal injury, injury to property, and wrongful death actions, a party cannot pursue both interrogatories and a deposition of the same party without leave of court. Nor is there any limit on the scope of interrogatories in CPLR 3131, which permits interrogatories to relate to any matters embraced by the general discovery requirements of CPLR 3101, and allows answers to interrogatories to be used to the same extent as answers given at a deposition. Notably, the presumptive limitations in the Commercial Division rule are not absolute. If circumstances warrant, the preliminary conference order may provide for more or less than the twenty-five (25) interrogatories set forth in Commercial Division Rule 11-a(a), and likewise, if circumstances warrant, the parties may agree, or the court may order, for good cause shown, that the limits on the content of interrogatories set forth in 11-a(b), be changed. See 11-a(c). In the Committee's view, the presumptive boundaries set forth in the rule will serve as a useful guideline for limiting unnecessary, burdensome or abusive discovery practices in appropriate circumstances.

RULE 11-b – Privilege Logs

This Rule governs the review of documents for privilege and the creation of privilege logs. The rule, which requires the parties to meet and confer regarding the scope of privilege review, contains a heavy bias in favor of a categorical approach to privilege logs, whereby the parties are encouraged to use categorical designations, where appropriate, to reduce the time and costs associated with preparing privilege logs. Parties who refuse to permit a categorical approach, and who insist instead on a document-by-document listing on the privilege log, may be required, upon application of the producing party, to bear the costs, including attorneys' fees, of preparing the document-by-document log. The rule also details how uninterrupted e-mail chains are to be treated on privilege logs, and provides that the parties may engage a Special Master to help them efficiently generate privilege logs, with costs to be shared.

CPLR 3122 prescribes a document-by-document approach to privilege logs, whereby the producing party is required to state, for each document, the legal ground for withholding the document, along with the type of document, the general subject matter of the document, and such other information as is sufficient to identify the document. See CPLR § 3122(b). The Committee believes that the provisions of Commercial Division Rule 11-b, with its preference for a categorical approach to privilege logs, as opposed to the document-by-document approach in CPLR 3122, should generally be adopted, especially for cases with heavy document discovery. The categorical approach outlined in Section 11-b(b)(1) of the rule is more efficient and cost-effective for the parties, helps to streamline litigation and facilitates expeditious court review. Requiring the parties to meet and confer, see 11-b(a), to discuss privilege logs and related issues is also sensible. Likewise, the rule's provisions regarding email chains, which are treated as one document on a document-by-document privilege log, see 11-b(b)(3), are sound.

The Committee is not in favor, however, of the rule's provision regarding cost allocation, see 11-b(b)(2), which permits a party required to produce a document-by-document privilege log (because the other side refused to consent to the categorical approach) to apply to the court for costs associated with that log. The Committee instead recommends that, where the parties disagree about which approach to follow, the court should determine whether the categorical approach or CPLR 3122 will be used. The Committee also does not recommend adopting the rule's requirement that a "responsible attorney," that is, someone who has supervisory responsibility over the privilege review, be actively involved in establishing and monitoring privilege review procedures, see 11-b(d), and then provide a "certification" that the review was properly conducted, see 11-b(1). In the Committee's view, this requirement is not necessary, as it goes without saying that privilege reviews must be conducted in a lawful, reasonable and good faith manner.

The Committee recommends the approach taken by some federal courts which, by local rule, eliminate the requirement that attorney-client communications and attorney work product created after the filing of the complaint be included in the privilege log, unless otherwise ordered by Court. See e.g. Local Rule 26.1(e)(2)(c) of the Southern District of Florida.

RULE 11-c – Discovery of Electronically Stored Information from Non-Parties

This Rule requires parties to adhere to the Commercial Division's Guidelines for Discovery of Electronically Stored Information (ESI) from nonparties. The Committee does not recommend adopting this rule, as such discovery is already adequately governed by the CPLR and the Uniform Civil Rules and adopting this rule would not significantly promote efficiency or reduce the burdens of litigation.

RULE 11-d – Limitations on Depositions

This Rule sets forth limits on the number of depositions that may be taken by the parties. In particular, unless the parties stipulate or the court orders otherwise, the parties are limited to ten (10) depositions of seven (7) hours per deponent. The rule further provides that the deposition of an entity through one or more representatives shall be treated as a single deposition even though more than one person may be designated to testify on the entity's behalf. Moreover, each deposition of an officer, director, principal or employee of an entity who is also a fact witness, as opposed to an entity representative pursuant to CPLR 3106(d), counts as a separate deposition. Finally, the deposition of an entity is treated as a single deposition, even though more than one person may be designated to testify on the entity's behalf, and the cumulative presumptive durational limit may be enlarged by agreement of the parties or upon application for leave of court, which is to be freely granted.

The Committee believe that this rule's limitations on the number of depositions, and length of each of those depositions, should be broadly adopted. Adopting such limitations, which mirror federal practice, will obviously lead to more efficient and streamlined discovery, and reduce the costs and burdens of litigation in appropriate circumstances. Notably, the presumptive limitations in the rule can be altered "for good cause shown," see 11-d(f), so this Commercial Division Rule, while providing useful boundaries, does not serve as a straightjacket. Nevertheless, parties will need to consider carefully what depositions they actually need.

RULE 11-e - Responses and Objections to Document Requests

This Rule is similar to CPLR 3122 with an additional directive in subsection (d) for the responding party to state whether the production of documents is complete, that there are no responsive, non-privileged documents in its custody or explain why the production is not complete.

The Committee supports this requirement, with the amendment that the statement be made at the time of disclosure rather than at the close of discovery.

RULE 11-f - Deposition of Entities; Identification of Matters

This Rule sets forth specific proceedings for notices of depositions and subpoenas and specifically provides a procedure for noticing corporate representations for deposition. Depositions pursuant to subpoena and notice are adequately addressed in CPLR Articles 23 and 31, respectively. The Committee does not see the need to adopt further language.

RULE 11-g - Proposed Form of Confidentiality Order

This Rule requires that any proposed confidentiality agreement conform to the form in Appendix B of the rules unless the parties seek permission from the court to deviate from that form. The Committee does not see the need to adopt this rule for all confidentiality orders. However, the Committee has reviewed the form in Appendix B and commends it to practitioners seeking to draft such an order.

Rule 12 - Non-Appearance at Conferences

This Rule provides a sanction for failure to appear at a conference. It is duplicative of language already contained in the Uniform Rules and therefore the Committee does not recommend adoption of this rule.

RULE 13 – Adherence to Discovery Schedule, Expert Disclosure

This Rule contains three subdivisions, which address, respectively, adherence to discovery schedules, document production in advance of depositions, and expert disclosure. The Committee's view is that none of these subdivisions should be adopted beyond the Commercial Division.

Subdivision (a), which addresses compliance with discovery schedules, does not impose any significant or meaningful change over the current rules and requirements, which are codified in Rule 202.12(f), including the imposition of sanctions for failures to comply. Therefore, adoption of this subdivision could not be expected to result in any improvements in civil litigation.

Subdivision (b) would permit a party seeking documents in preparation for a deposition to seek preclusion of any such documents that are not timely produced. This appears to be an effort to address the situation of depositions being adjourned because the parties do not have all documents necessary to prepare for and conduct the deposition. While this remedy may be well suited to commercial litigation, it is view of the Committee that it is not suitable for personal injury cases. Unlike commercial litigation, which typically involves documents that are in the possession of the parties, documents pertinent to personal injury cases (i.e., medical and employment records) are often in the possession of non-parties and preclusion would be inappropriate in such circumstances. The Committee is of the view that CPLR 3126 provides a more flexible rule that is effective in addressing failures to comply with orders directing the production of documents, without requiring mandatory preclusion of evidence that could lead to unjust results.

Subdivision (c), addresses expert disclosure in three respects. First, it would require the parties to confer regarding the timing of expert disclosure within thirty (30) days of the completion of factual discovery and would require all expert disclosure to be completed before the Note of Issue is filed. The Committee finds that a state-wide "one size fits all" time requirement is neither warranted nor appropriate. Rather, courts should be free to fashion schedules most suited to their caseloads and the needs of each specific case. The Committee further notes that adoption of this timing requirement would lead to delays in filing Notes of Issue and increase litigation costs by forcing parties to retain experts in cases that would otherwise settle before such costs are incurred. The Committee is also concerned that rigid timing mandates without regard to prejudice would prevent cases from being decided on their merits. For these reasons, the Committee is of the view that the timing requirements of Rule 13(c) would be counterproductive. Finally, the Committee does not recommend expanded expert disclosure beyond that currently required by CPLR 3103(d)(1)(i).

RULE 14- Disclosure Disputes

This Rule requires parties to send a letter to the court raising any existing discovery disputes before making a formal motion., and notes that discovery disputes are preferred to be resolved through court conferences as opposed to motion practice. Many judges have implemented such a procedure, but statewide application may not be feasible, depending on caseload volume.

The rules for noncommercial division cases already require that discovery disputes first be attempted to be resolved between the parties before any party makes a motion. An affidavit of a good faith attempt to resolve the matter must be attached to every motion for discovery (Rule 202.7). Therefore, the Committee does not recommend adoption of this rule.

RULE 14-a – Rulings at Disclosure Conferences

This Rule sets forth a procedure for the memorialization of decisions made at disclosure conferences. The Committee does not recommend the procedures set forth in this rule. However, the Committee recommends that all decisions or agreements at disclosure conferences be reduced to writing and either stipulated to or so ordered by the court.

RULE 15- Adjournments of Conferences

This Rule provides that adjournments on consent are permitted with the approval of the court for good cause and that adjournment of a conference will not change any subsequent date in the preliminary conference order unless directed by the court. There is no comparable provision in the Uniform Rules. Nonetheless, granting of adjournments is solely within each judge's discretion. The Committee believes it should remain within judicial discretion and therefore does not recommend adoption of this rule.

RULE 16 - Motions in General

This Rule specifies the content and form for notices of motion and orders to show cause, requires that proposed orders accompany any dispositive motion, and sets forth criteria for adjournments of both dispositive and non-dispositive motions. Current CPLR and Uniform Rule provisions substantially address the items in this rule and an additional rule is not needed. See CPLR 2214 (a); 3212(b); and Uniform Rule 22 NYCRR 202.8 (e)(1).

RULE 17 - Length of Papers

This Rule limits to twenty-five (25) pages the length of memoranda of law, affidavits, and affirmations and to fifteen (15) pages any reply memoranda. The Committee does not recommend adoption of this rule because there are some cases that simply require more extensive analysis, and justice would not be served by making parties move for permission to present that analysis.

RULE 18 - Sur-Reply and Post-Submission Papers

This Rule, absent express permission in advance of the motion, bars sur-replies and post-motion-submission papers, except permits a letter that notes any post-submission court decision relevant to the pending issues. The Committee does not recommend adoption of this rule because it should be left to judicial discretion whether to allow sur-reply and post-submission papers. When counsel includes new arguments or cases in reply papers, justice would not be served by having a presumption of no response.

RULE 19 - Orders to Show Cause

This Rule allows orders to show cause only when there is a genuine urgency and further bars the submission of reply papers on orders to show cause. The Committee does not recommend adoption of this rule because, currently, different judges and courts have practices that make a uniform rule difficult to apply. Additionally, a general prohibition of reply papers would not further the resolution of motions on the merits.

RULE 19-a. - Motions for Summary Judgement; Statements of Material Facts

This Rule sets forth that in summary judgment motions, the court may direct that the movant annex to the papers a short and concise numbered list of the material facts with respect to which there is no genuine issue of fact. The opponent must respond to each numbered fact and state whether there is a disputed question. Both movant and opponent must provide record citations. The Committee recommends this rule, as it is likely to greatly assist in narrowing and clearly setting forth the material issues. Indeed, the Committee recommends that a statement of material facts not in dispute should be required in all cases and not just where the court directs. The rule is also consistent with federal practice and may curtail summary judgment motions where there are material issues of fact.

RULE 20 - Temporary Restraining Orders

This Rule requires notice to an adverse party of any application for a temporary restraining order, unless the moving party can demonstrate that significant prejudice would ensue from such notice. The Committee recommends adoption of this rule because it advances a just result by giving all parties notice of the issues and an opportunity to comment. This rule expands the requirements of Uniform Rule 202.7(f) in that it specifically requires the moving party to provide copies of the papers to the opposing parties unless prior notice would prejudice the moving party's rights.

RULE 21 – Courtesy Copies

This Rule bars courtesy copies to the court on motions submitted in hard copy and requires courtesy copies on motions submitted via electronic filing. This rule states that courtesy copies of pleadings shall not be submitted unless requested but goes on to state that such copies shall be submitted in electronically filed cases. The Committee does not recommend this rule, as it is contrary to the goals of paperless electronic litigation.

RULE 22- Oral Argument

This Rule permits any party to a motion to request oral argument by letter or by so stating on the face of the motion or opposition papers. The rule goes on to state that the judge will have the discretion whether to hear oral argument and to set the timeframe for such argument with notice of the date being given, if practicable, at least 14 days in advance. Many judges outside of the Commercial Part have specific rules regarding oral argument that are governed by their caseloads and case types. Therefore, the Committee does not recommend adoption of this rule except for the language: "Any party may request oral argument on the face of its papers," which has the salutary effect of avoiding additional letters and applications.

RULE 23- 60-Day Rule

This Rule provides that, if there is no decision on a motion within 60 days of submission, movant’s counsel is required to send a letter to the court alerting it to that fact. The Committee does not recommend adoption of this rule. Judges are presumed to be aware of standards and goals.

RULE 24- Advance Notice of Motions

This Rule provides that, except for discovery motions, or motions to dismiss, or motions for summary judgment, including summary judgment motions in lieu of a complaint, or motions to be relieved as counsel, or motions for pro hac vice admission, or motions for reargument, or motions in limine, parties must file a motion notice letter in advance of making any other type of motion that will be followed by a motion conference. The Committee does not recommend the adoption of this rule.

RULE 25 - Scheduling of Trial

This Rule provides, inter alia, that where a party seeks adjournment of the trial date “for any reason,” the application must be made in the absence of “extraordinary circumstances” within ten days of the setting of the trial date.

The Committee does not recommend adoption of this rule, as it may result in substantial injustice.

RULE 26 - Length of Trial

This Rule requires that “[a]t least ten days prior to trial or such other time as the court may set, the parties ... shall furnish the court with a realistic estimate of the length of the trial.”

The Rule is silent as to what may occur when the trial exceeds its anticipated length. Also, in many counties, a judge is not assigned until after jury selection is completed. At that time, a judge may inquire as to the estimated length of the trial.

The Committee does not recommend the adoption of this rule.

RULE 27 - Motions In Limine

This Rule requires that “parties shall make motions in limine no later than ten days prior to the scheduled pre-trial conference date ... unless otherwise directed by the court.” The Committee does not recommend adoption of this rule.

This rule would constitute a drastic change from current practice. Presently, while making such motions later rather than sooner carries its own inherent penalty (i.e., the court is less likely to view the motion with favor), there is no deadline per se. More than that, the case law holds that a motion in limine need not be made in writing absent a court rule that provides to the contrary. Wilkinson v Br. Airways, 292 AD2d 263, 264 [1st Dept 2002] (“Contrary to plaintiff’s contentions, there is no requirement that an in limine motion be made in writing and be in accordance with CPLR 2214. The court, therefore, properly considered defendant’s oral application”).

Good practice usually dictates that motions in limine be made in writing and that they be early enough so as to afford the adversary adequate time to respond and the court adequate time to make a careful ruling. Nonetheless, there may be parties who find it cost-prohibitive to make such motions in writing in every instance. There may also be instances in which the application is made orally because the right to the ruling is so clear that the movant does not anticipate opposition. Additionally, there may be instances where the need for a motion in limine cannot be anticipated until the offer of proof is made.

Further, the rule does not indicate what consequence, if any, should follow when a party fails to timely move for preclusion of proof. The Committee is concerned that the rule could lead to admission of proof that would otherwise be clearly inadmissible, in some instances altering the substantive result of the trial.

RULE 28 - Pre-Marking of Exhibits

This Rule requires that the exhibits each side intends to offer in evidence be marked for identification at the pre-trial conference. The rule further requires that the objections, if any, to the adversary’s proof be lodged at that time. The Committee does not recommend adoption of this rule. In many courts there is no pre-trial conference that would allow for this practice.

RULE 29 - Identification of Deposition Testimony

This Rule requires that each party furnish “[a]t least ten days prior to trial or such other time as the court may set” “a list of deposition testimony to be offered by it as to which objection has not been made and, identified separately, a list of deposition testimony as to which objection has been made.” The Committee does not recommend adoption of this rule.

This rule would arguably be inconsistent with CPLR 3117, governing use of depositions at trial. For example, CPLR 3117(a)(1) provides that “any deposition may be used by any party for the purpose of contradicting or impeaching the testimony of the deponent as a witness,” not that the deposition may be used only if the proponent notifies the court of the proposed use at least ten days prior to trial. Similarly, CPLR 3117(a)(3)(i) permits use in certain circumstances of the deposition of a deponent who has died, again without any caveat concerning pre-trial notification of the proponent’s intent. Additionally, this rule would add to the cost of litigation, without furthering judicial economy.

RULE 30- Settlement and Pretrial Conferences

Rule 30(a) provides that the court may schedule a settlement conference at any time after the discovery cutoff date. The Committee recommends adoption of this rule.

Rule 30(b) provides that counsel shall confer prior to a pre-trial conference, and be prepared to discuss uncontested and contested facts. The Committee does not recommend adoption of this portion of the rule to the extent that it assumes that the trial court judge will be known prior to trial.

Rule 30(c) provides that prior to a pre-trial conference, counsel for the parties to consult in good faith regarding their respective experts’ anticipated testimony that is in dispute. The Committee does not recommend adoption of this rule because the requirements in CPLR 3101(d) adequately address areas where there are no disputes between experts.

RULE 31 - Pre-Trial Memoranda, Exhibit Book and Requests for Jury Instructions

Rule 31(a) provides that “[c]ounsel shall submit pre-trial memoranda at the pre-trial conference, or such other time as the court may set” and that “[a] single memorandum no longer than 25 pages shall be submitted by each side.” Under the current rules, section 202.35[c] of the Uniform Rules provides that when ordered to do so, the parties “shall submit to the court, before the commencement of trial, trial memoranda which shall be exchanged among counsel.” The Committee does not recommend adoption of this portion of the rule beyond what is currently provided in the uniform rules.

Rule 31(b) requires that counsel “submit an indexed binder or notebook of trial exhibits for the court’s use,” and, in addition, an extra copy “for each attorney on trial” and for the use of the witnesses. The Committee does not recommend adoption of this portion of the rule for all trials, as it is with the discretion of the trial judge to manage such matters as warranted by the case.

Rule 31(c) requires, where the trial is by jury, that the parties submit “case-specific requests to charge and proposed jury interrogatories” either “on the pre-trial conference date or such other time as the court may set.” The Committee does not recommend adoption of this portion of the rule for all trials, as it is within the discretion of the trial judge to determine the timing of the submission of the request to charge and the jury interrogatories.

RULE 32- Scheduling of Witnesses

This Rule would require each party to “identify in writing for the court the witnesses it intends to call, the order in which they shall testify and the estimated length of their testimony.” The list would have to be provided “[a]t the pre-trial conference or at such time as the court may direct ...”, with a copy to the adversary.

This rule would greatly alter New York practice. There is currently no requirement that each side provide the other with a list of all the witnesses that will be called. Siegel, N.Y. Prac. § 349 [5th ed., January 2017 Update] (“The caselaw under the CPLR has confirmed that parties must reveal the name of anyone they know of who witnessed the event at issue. This does not mean that upon demand each party must serve on the other a list of all witnesses she intends to use at the trial”).

The Committee does not recommend adoption of this rule. First, while one could argue that pre-trial disclosure of all witnesses would better serve to combat “trial by ambush,” the Committee believes that the added requirements are unnecessary to achieve that end and are more likely to frustrate disposition on the merits. As matters now stand, the case law already requires disclosure of those witnesses (including eyewitnesses and notice witnesses) whose testimony could otherwise unfairly surprise the adversary. To the extent that this rule could be used to preclude calling of a witness whose testimony would not be surprising, the rule achieves no end except for frustration of the merits.

The Committee is also concerned with what could occur when, for example, the trial reaches the third hour of the testimony of a fully disclosed witness whose testimony was estimated to last only two hours. Again, the concern is that procedure could trump merits.

RULE 32-a - Direct Testimony by Affidavit

This Rule states, “The court may require that direct testimony of a party’s own witness in a non-jury trial or evidentiary hearing shall be submitted in affidavit form, provided, however, that the court may not require the submission of a direct testimony affidavit from a witness who is not under the control of the party offering the testimony.”

Although the rule is not mandatory (the operative word is “may”) and would not impair the parties’ right to conduct “live” cross-examination and re-direct examination of the witnesses, the Committee does not recommend adoption of this rule.

Even assuming that the provision makes sense in a large commercial case in which teams of lawyers will have ample opportunity to carefully draft the “direct testimony” affidavits of all the witnesses — and one can argue that such mechanism is even in that setting more likely to result in counsel’s version of the witness’s testimony than that of the witness — the same quantum of legal resources will not necessarily be available in other kinds of actions involving lesser sums of money.

RULE 33 - Preclusion

This Rule provides that “[f]ailure to comply with Rules 28, 29, 31 and 32 may result in preclusion pursuant to CPLR 3126.” The Committee believes that this rule is vague and, depending on how it is construed, could lead to substantial injustice, and does not recommend its adoption.

Currently, preclusion is only one of the penalties authorized by CPLR § 3126. The statute also authorizes “striking out of pleadings or parts thereof,” staying of proceedings, and “an order that the issues to which the information is relevant shall be deemed resolved” in the adversary’s favor. This gives rise to the question of whether the rule’s mention of only one of the statutorily listed sanctions, preclusion, means that the others cannot be appropriately imposed. If that is so and the only, or even primary, penalty is preclusion, such may unfairly impact the party with the burden of proof. Beyond that, the Committee questions whether it makes sense to posit that preclusion is the only possible sanction for such transgressions as calling a disclosed witness out of order, miscalculating the duration of the witness' testimony, or failing to pre-mark an exhibit.

More fundamentally, the Committee believes that the current rules adequately deal with the non-compliance of pre-trial and trial procedures and orders.

RULE 34- Staggered Court Appearances

This Rule is intended to encourage court staggered appearances by providing specific time slots for parties to appear whatever the nature of the appearance. For example, judges generally have specific motion and conference days and, in accordance with this rule, each judge on such a motion or conference day would schedule a specific time slot in which each motion or conference would proceed, including the length of time allotted for each. It has not been unusual for courts to schedule all appearances on any given day at, for example, 9:30 AM, only to have very crowded courtrooms at that time and parties often waiting hours to be heard.

The preamble to this Rule notes the need for cooperation among the members of the bar and parties if the rule is to succeed in accomplishing its goal of reducing congestion among cases, attorneys and parties in courtrooms and eliminating inordinate wait time to be heard. Our committee believes that the efficiencies to be gained with staggered court appearances are significant and accordingly the Committee recommends expanding the application of this rule to all action types.

MEMORANDUM

October 15, 2018

From: John W. McConnell
Re: Request for Public Comment on the Proposed Adoption of Certain Rules of the Commercial Division in Other Courts of Civil Jurisdiction

Earlier this year, at the request of the Administrative Board, the Unified Court System’s Advisory Committee on Civil Practice conducted a detailed examination of the practice rules of the Commercial Division of Supreme Court (22 NYCRR 202.70[g]), to assess the suitability of those rules for broader promulgation in other courts of civil jurisdiction. In its July 2018 report to the Chief Judge on this subject (Exh. A), the Advisory Committee recommended the broader application of nine Commercial Division rules:

- Rule 3(a) - Appointment of a court-annexed mediator (as amended).
- Rule 3(b) - Settlement conference before a judge not assigned to the case.
- Rule 11-a - Limitations on interrogatories.
- Rule 11-b - Privilege logs (in part).
- Rule 11-d - Limitations on depositions.
- Rule 11-e - Responses and objections to document requests (as amended).
- Rule 19-a - Statement of material facts for summary judgment motions.
- Rule 20 - Temporary restraining orders.
- Rule 34 - Staggered court appearances.

The Committee concluded that other rules, though highly suitable for Commercial Division practice, were less appropriate for statewide adoption for one of various reasons: they were duplicative of existing rules or would lead to added litigation costs or administrative burdens, or addressed issues exclusively relevant to Commercial Division practice (Exh. A, p. 1-2).

The Administrative Board is now seeking public comment on the recommendations set forth in the Advisory Committee’s Report.

Re: Proposed Adoption of Certain Rules of the Commercial Division in
Other Courts of Civil Jurisdiction

The Committee on Civil Practice Law and Rules studied the proposal of the Unified Court System's Advisory Committee of Civil Practice to adopt certain rules of the Commercial Division in other courts of civil jurisdiction. The proposal included adoption of the following rules of the Commercial Division:

- Rule 3(a) – Appointment of a court-annexed mediator (as amended)
- Rule 3(b) – Settlement conference before a judge not assigned to the case
- Rule 11-a – Limitations on interrogatories
- Rule 11-b – Privilege log (in part)
- Rule 11-d – Limitation on depositions
- Rule 11-e – Responses and objections to document requests (as amended)
- Rule 19-a – Statement of material facts for summary judgment motions
- Rule 20 – Temporary restraining orders
- Rule 34 – Staggered court appearances

With the exception of Rule 19-a, the Committee unanimously approved the proposal at its November 16, 2018.

As to Rule 19-a, a subcommittee was formed to further study the rule and its findings will be presented at the full committee meeting on January 18, 2019, which is after the January 15, 2018 deadline for comment. We, therefore, kindly request that the committee be given until January 28, 2019 to submit its comment concerning Rule 19-a. Kindly advise whether the CPLR Committee could have until January 28, 2019 to submit its comment concerning Rule 19-a. Your professional courtesy is appreciated.

Subject: Recommendation by the Unified Court System's Advisory Committee on Civil Practice as to Rule 19-a of the practice rules of the Commercial Division of Supreme Court

We thank the OCA for extending the time for comment to January 28, 2019, which allowed the NYSBA CPLR Committee to meet and discuss its concerns about the proposal to extend Rule 19-a of the practice rules of the Commercial Division of Supreme Court to all civil cases in all New York State civil courts and make the service of the statements specified in the rule mandatory.

Rule 19-a of the practice rules of the Commercial Division of Supreme Court provides that Commercial Division justices may direct a party moving for summary judgment to provide a paragraph by paragraph statement of the material facts as to which there are no genuine issues to be tried (with citations to the record) and the party opposing the motion to provide a paragraph by paragraph response thereto (admitting or controverting the "facts" cited by the movant and citing to the record where a fact listed by the movant is disputed). At subsection (c), the Rule provides that

Each numbered paragraph in the statement of material facts required to be served by the moving party will be deemed to be admitted for purposes of the motion unless specifically controverted by a correspondingly numbered paragraph in the statement required to be served by the opposing party.

In its recommendations to adopt certain Commercial Division Rules throughout the civil courts (July 2018), the Unified Court System's Advisory Committee on Civil Practice ("Advisory Committee") recommends that Rule 19-a apply to any motion for summary judgment in all types of civil cases in all of New York's civil courts but that the submission of the movant's statement and the responding statement by the party opposing the motion, as specified in the rule, be mandatory rather at the direction of the court.

After report and discussion, and upon vote by its members at its January 18, 2019 meeting, the NYSBA Committee on the Civil Practice Law and Rules ("CPLR Committee") opposes the Advisory Committee recommendation as to Rule 19-a.

Considerations raised in the CPLR's meeting included the following.

The recommendation of the Advisory Committee would engraft on CPLR 3212 an additional document to be submitted in support of a motion for summary judgment. CPLR 3212 provides what are the necessary factual documents to be served by the movant. Specifically, 3212 (b) provides:

A motion for summary judgment shall be supported by affidavit, by a copy of the pleadings and by other available proof, such as depositions and written admissions. The affidavit shall be by a person having knowledge of the facts; it shall recite all the material facts; and it shall show that there is no defense to the cause of action or that the cause of action or defense has no merit.

Nowhere does CPLR 3212 mention any of the documents described in Rule 19-a. Only the State legislature with the approval of the Governor can amend the CPLR to provide another document that must be filed in support of, and in opposition to a motion for summary judgment.

Additionally, if the recommendation of the Advisory Committee was accepted, the party opposing a motion for summary judgment may be unfairly prejudiced as follows: the party opposing the motion (a) provides by affidavit facts which dispute a purported fact which the movant contends in its Rule 19-a is a material fact as which there is no genuine issue to be tried, but (b) inadvertently fails to dispute the "fact" in its Rule 19-a response. Under Rule 19-a, the purported fact is deemed admitted by the party opposing the motion, despite its affidavit disputing the "fact."

Such a result would contradict the following terms of CPLR 3212(b):

the motion shall be denied if any party shall show facts sufficient to require a trial of any issue of fact.

While the possibility of such an inadvertent failure is unlikely where the movant serves a simple, straightforward Rule 19-a statement, the risk is heightened where the movant has served a long and complex statement under Rule 19-a.

Additionally, if Rule 19-a is extended to all civil cases as the Advisory Committee proposes, such would add undue and costly burdens to summary judgment motions which already require care in preparing affidavits in support and opposition and supporting, opposing, and reply memoranda of law.

Finally, while the CPLR Committee opposes any extension of Rule 19-a beyond the Commercial Division, if the Advisory Committee decides to promote such extension, the CPLR Committee urges that any such extension does not include making the service of the statement and responding statement described in the rule mandatory but, as Rule 19-a currently reads, only upon instruction of the court handling the case. The judge handling a case should have the flexibility of deciding that he or she would not benefit from the filing of the statements described in Rule 19-a.

Re: New York City Bar Association Comments on the Proposed Adoption of Certain Rules of the Commercial Division in Other Courts of Civil Jurisdiction

Dear Mr. McConnell:

Thank you for the opportunity to comment on the proposed adoption of certain rules of the Commercial Division in other courts of civil jurisdiction.

The New York City Bar Association (the “Association”) commends the Advisory Committee on Civil Practice (the “Advisory Committee”) for undertaking this analysis and for its thoughtful discussion of each of the rules of the Commercial Division, upon which it bases its recommendations – both with respect to those rules that the Advisory Committee recommends adopting and those that it does not.

The Association supports the adoption of Rules 3(b), 11-a, 11-d, 20, and 34 of the Commercial Division in other courts of civil jurisdiction as proposed by the Advisory Committee. In the interest of brevity, we do not further comment on these rules. The Association also supports the Advisory Committee’s recommendations with respect to Rules 22 and 30(a), which the Advisory Committee recommends the adoption of (at least in part), but which do not appear in the Advisory Committee’s covering memorandum listing the rules that it recommends adopting.

With respect to several other Commercial Division rules, however, the Association disagrees in some respect with the recommendation of the Advisory Committee. Specifically, the Association opposes the adoption of several rules that the Advisory Committee recommended adopting, recommends the adoption of certain rules that were not recommended for adoption by the Advisory Committee, or otherwise has comments on the recommendations made by the Advisory Committee. The Association's comments on these rules are as follows:

I. RULE 3(a)

The Association agrees with the Advisory Committee's recommendation that Rule 3(a) of the Commercial Division be adopted. However, we do not believe that changing the word "direct" to "advise," is consistent with or furthers the recommendation expressed by the Advisory Committee in the last paragraph of its comment, "that greater use be made of experienced attorneys as court-approved mediators who would be modestly compensated for their time by the parties." If the goal is to take steps that result in the greater use of mediation, we believe that can be best achieved by allowing a court to direct the parties to mediation where appropriate. Moreover, the Advisory Committee's reason for its proposed amendment is not explained in its report.

Further, although the Commercial Division rule refers to an "uncompensated" mediator, as correctly noted by the Advisory Committee, we agree with the Advisory Committee's recommendation, which refers to the appointment of a "court-annexed mediator," leaving out the word "uncompensated." This recommendation is in fact consistent with the practice of the Commercial Division in some counties, where mediators are compensated after the first few hours of a mediation.

While we support the increased use of mediation in cases that the court deems appropriate, we reiterate and adopt here an important recommendation made in the June 2018 report of the City Bar's Committee for the Efficient Resolution of Disputes: "[I]f mediation is to be an important factor in changing the litigation culture, administrators of court-annexed mediation programs and dispute resolution providers will need to take significant steps to assure that capable mediators are available in sufficient numbers. To increase the number of effective mediators, it should become accepted practice – encouraged by the courts – for advocates to serve regularly as mediators throughout their careers. Among other things, that would increase advocate experience with the mediation process and awareness of the benefits of early case evaluation and the informal exchange of facts."

II. RULE 5

The Association agrees with the Advisory Committee's recommendation not to adopt Rule 5. We also agree that on-line notices of the status of actions and motions would be useful and note that the e-courts notices received by counsel who have appeared in an action provide that information.

III. RULE 7

The Advisory Committee does not recommend the adoption of Rule 7, but instead makes certain recommendations, without proposing a specific rule, concerning improvements of the methods by which “pro forma” court conferences, especially concerning discovery, can be conducted.

The Association notes that one of the most common complaints raised by counsel and the courts is the inefficiencies attendant to “pro-forma” court conferences, such as preliminary and compliance conferences, often resulting from the volume of cases that appear on a court’s conference calendar. Accordingly, the Association agrees with the Advisory Committee’s recommendation that the courts utilize NYSCEF and other technology to avoid in court appearances for “pro-forma” matters, such as setting discovery dates or to report on discovery. We also agree that counsel should be required to e-file a statement as to whether discovery is proceeding as per the scheduling order, to obviate the need for an in-court conference where there is no dispute or non-compliance. Conferences can then be reserved for instances where there are active discovery disputes or non-compliance issues to address. We recommend that the Advisory Committee consider whether this approach can be implemented as a matter of practice or whether, instead, a rule would be advisable.

IV. RULE 8

The Association respectfully disagrees with the Advisory Committee’s opinion that Rule 8 should not be adopted.

The Advisory Committee correctly describes Rule 8 as requiring counsel for all parties to confer prior to a preliminary or compliance conference about such matters as the resolution of the case, discovery, alternative dispute resolution, voluntary informal exchange of information, and issues of electronic discovery. However, the Advisory Committee opines that the “rule is not necessary in the majority of civil cases where the issues can be addressed expeditiously at the conference, or through the adoption of a court-approved scheduling form that obviates the need for an in-person preliminary conference.”

We note that, at present, the rules do not provide for the electronic submission of preliminary and compliance conference orders in lieu of attendance by counsel at court conferences. Accordingly, we believe that the rules should address the procedures extant.

The experience of many attorneys is that, all too often, issues are not addressed or resolved expeditiously at court conferences. Moreover, some law firms have a practice of sending people to attend court conferences who may not be working on or familiar with the case, which often makes it difficult for counsel to address outstanding issues or agree upon a scheduling order that makes sense given the facts of the case. Presumably, the counsel that would take part in a required pre-hearing consultation, which is usually conducted by telephone, would be knowledgeable about the case and the issues. Accordingly, the Association believes that consultation between counsel prior to court conferences would result in greater efficiency at those conferences and, therefore, recommends the adoption of Rule 8 of the Commercial Division in other courts of civil jurisdiction. Rule 8 should, however, be harmonized with Uniform Rule 202.12(b) and (c), which govern preliminary conferences in all civil courts.

V. RULE 11-b

The Advisory Committee recommends the adoption of Commercial Division Rule 11-b, except that (i) instead of providing that a party who insists on a document-by-document privilege log may be required (upon application of the opposing party, with “good cause” shown) to reimburse the costs associated with producing it, the Advisory Committee recommends that in the event of a disagreement the court should determine “whether the categorical approach or CPLR 3122 will be used”; (ii) the Advisory Committee does not recommend adopting the rule’s requirement that a “responsible attorney” (as defined in the rule) certify that the privilege review was properly conducted; and (iii) the Advisory Committee recommends the addition of a specification that attorney-client communications and attorney work product created after the filing of the complaint need not be included in the log unless otherwise ordered by the court. The Association has the following comments on these aspects of the Advisory Committee’s recommendation.

On the question of how to handle a dispute over whether a categorical approach should be used, while we agree that it might be most efficient to allow the court to direct that approach in proper cases, we question whether a rule providing as much would require an amendment to the CPLR. Under CPLR 3122(b), a party who has requested documents that are being withheld on any ground is entitled to certain information on a document-by-document basis unless the requirements for a protective order under CPLR 3103 are met. An agreement between the parties to instead produce categorical logs constitutes a waiver of that right. The rule attempts to provide an incentive for parties to enter into such an agreement by providing that, “unless the court deems it appropriate to issue a protective order under CPLR 3103,” a party who insists on a document-by-document log will receive one but acts at its own peril in terms of possible cost-shifting. To the extent that the Advisory Committee’s recommendation would allow a court to require a party to waive its right to a document-by-document log under circumstances that do not otherwise warrant a protective order, the Association questions whether this can be done by court rule.

Regarding certification by a “Responsible Attorney,” it is not clear how much of the rule’s certification provision the Advisory Committee would delete. The Association agrees that the definition of “Responsible Attorney” contained in the rule seems unnecessarily narrow, and that it would be enough to provide that a certification signed by any attorney acting on behalf of the producing party’s law firm binds both the attorney and the firm. We also note that when this rule was originally proposed, the Association’s Council on Judicial Administration expressed the view that the representations of specific facts set forth in the rule’s certification were necessary to provide the type of information that a receiving party would want to review before accepting the categories designated by the producing party. The Association stands by that view.

Finally, the Association agrees that in most cases there is little or no purpose to be served by logging work product prepared after the commencement of litigation or communications with litigation counsel after such commencement. We believe, however, that this is generally addressed through objections and/or agreed-upon limitations, such that as a practical matter parties usually can avoid that burden in appropriate circumstances. We suggest that a blanket rule exempting all post-commencement attorney-client communications and work product from the logging requirement may sweep too broadly, particularly insofar as such an exemption would appear to apply to communications with counsel other than litigation counsel.

VI. RULE 11-c

The Advisory Committee does not recommend the adoption of this Rule, which provides that where electronically stored information (“ESI”) is requested from non-parties, the parties should adhere to certain Guidelines that have been promulgated for such discovery. The Advisory Committee cites the existence of adequate rules in the CPLR and the Uniform Civil Rules as its reason for declining to recommend such adoption, but does not specify which rules it views as adequately covering the matters that the Guidelines address. The Association is of the view that the Guidelines promote efficiency and reduce the burden of litigation, particularly on non-parties. Among other things, they help to settle expectations about what should and should not be required of non-parties, and may thereby reduce the need for court intervention. Moreover, given that the Guidelines are just that – Guidelines, to which the rule specifies that the parties “should” adhere – the Association believes that the rule contains enough flexibility to allow the Guidelines to be bypassed in whole or in part in cases where they would not serve their intended purposes.

Accordingly, the Association respectfully disagrees with the Advisory Committee’s conclusion and suggests that it be reconsidered.

VII. RULE 11-e

The Advisory Committee recommends the adoption of this rule, except that it proposes one modification to subsection (d), which requires each party to state, no less than one month prior to the close of fact discovery or at such other date as the court directs, (i) whether production of responsive documents in its possession, custody, or control is complete, or (ii) that there are no responsive documents in its possession, custody, or control. Specifically, the Advisory Committee would require the statement to be made at the time of disclosure rather than at or near the close of fact discovery.

The Association respectfully disagrees with the Advisory Committee’s proposed modification of this rule and believes it should be adopted as is.

The disclosure obligation is ongoing, and requires a party to supplement its disclosures if, as, and when new material becomes available to it. Requiring a statement of completeness to be made (or reconfirmed) at or near the end of fact discovery ensures that disclosure is complete at the most critical point: when the period provided for it is ending.

Accordingly, the Association believes that if such a statement is to be required only once (as both the rule and the Advisory Committee’s proposed amendment seem to contemplate), requiring it to be made near the close of fact discovery is more appropriate than requiring it to be made sooner. The Association notes, however, that counsel, throughout the discovery process, including at the time document productions are made, should be advising each other (whether orally or in writing) of the status of their document productions, including as to completeness, as part of the overall obligation to confer in good faith.

VIII. RULE 11-g

The Advisory Committee does not recommend adopting this rule, which requires the parties, “in those parts of the Commercial Division where the presiding justice so elects,” to use a particular form for any proposed confidentiality order and to provide an explanation for any proposed deviations from that form. The Advisory Committee does, however, commend the form to practitioners seeking to draft such an order. The Association respectfully suggests that, given the Advisory Committee’s expressed view about the form, it reconsider its position about the rule. The rule itself gives every individual judge the flexibility to elect to use the form or not. It also gives practitioners the flexibility to agree to variations where the circumstances so warrant; the requirement that the variation be explained is reasonable and not onerous. And it gives parties a baseline that will likely streamline the process of drafting proposed confidentiality orders. For these reasons, the Association believes that the rule should be adopted.

IX. RULE 14-a

Although the Advisory Committee recommended that all decisions or agreements at disclosure conferences be reduced to writing, the Advisory Committee nevertheless does not recommend the procedure set forth in Rule 14-a. The Advisory Committee did not provide any reasoning as to why the Commercial Division’s procedure was not recommended. The Association agrees with the Advisory Committee that all decisions should be memorialized and believes that the Rule 14-a procedures are sufficient to accomplish this goal. The Association therefore believes that Rule 14-a should be adopted.

X. RULE 17

The Advisory Committee does not recommend the adoption of Rule 17, which sets limits on the length of memoranda of law, affidavits, and affirmations.<sup>1</sup>

The Association disagrees with the reasoning of the Advisory Committee in recommending that Rule 17 not be adopted. The Advisory Committee reasons that there are some cases “that simply require more extensive analysis,” and that the parties in those cases should not be arbitrarily limited in terms of the length of their papers. But that is surely also the case in the Commercial Division, in which cases are often complex, both legally and factually, and may be document intensive. Moreover, the Advisory Committee recommends against the adoption of certain other rules outside of the Commercial Division specifically because those rules were deemed unnecessary, and potentially burdensome, for what are often less complex cases. Accordingly, the Association recommends the adoption of Rule 17.

XI. RULE 19-a

<sup>1</sup> The Association notes that Rule 17 no longer sets a page limit, but rather has been amended to set word limits. Specifically, Rule 17 limits briefs, memoranda of law, affirmations, and affidavits to 7,000 words, with reply briefs limited to 4,200 words.

In the case of Rule 19-a, the Advisory Committee not only recommended the adoption of Rule 19-a, but in fact recommended that it be mandatory in all cases rather than only those where the court directs. Rule 19-a requires that a numbered list of undisputed material facts be annexed to all summary judgment motions, to which the opposing party can then respond.

Although the Association believes that such statements can be helpful to the parties and the judge in certain cases, the Association also recognizes that there are certain cases in which requiring a statement of undisputed facts will add an additional cost and burden without adding any value. Further, as some Commercial Division judges over the years have not required the submission of a Rule 19-a statement, it is clear that the preparation and submission of such a statement, in certain cases, before certain judges, would serve no purpose. The Association therefore recommends that Rule 19-a be adopted in its original form, such that a Rule 19-a statement of undisputed facts would be required only where the court believes that it will genuinely increase efficiency.

Re: Matrimonial Practice and Rules Committee
 Response to Request for Comment on the Proposed Adoption of Certain Rules of the Commercial Division in other Courts of Civil Jurisdiction

Dear Mr. McConnell:

The Matrimonial Practices Advisory and Rules Committee (the "Committee") has concerns about the adoption of certain rules and recommendations of the Commercial Division of the Supreme Court to matrimonial cases.

After a discussion and analysis of the recommendations, the Committee has concluded that many of these rules are inapplicable and inappropriate in matrimonial litigation, and that matrimonial cases should continue to be governed by the provisions of 22 NYCRR Sections 202.16 and 202.16-a and 202.16-b. We have the following comments regarding specific rules:

Rules 3(a) and 3(b) Appointment of a court-annexed mediator and settlement conference before a judge not assigned to the case

Matrimonial cases have their own protocols for mediation which must consider issues of allegations or findings of domestic violence or power imbalances. There are no (summary) jury trials in matrimonial cases. In fact, with the enactment of DRL 170 (7), most divorces are resolved on the grounds of an irretrievable breakdown in the marital relationship for a period more than 6 month. The only issue that a jury can be demanded on is the issue of grounds, and there are few if any jury trials statewide. Certainly, trials on the issues of custody, parenting time, orders of protection, child support and maintenance would not be appropriate for summary jury trials.

Referring cases to a different Judge in a matrimonial action for a conference would defeat the one judge/one family concept, especially in a non-jury case where the Judge has handled the matter from inception to trial. The additional strain on judicial resources would make the rule impracticable in matrimonial actions.

Rule 7 Preliminary Conferences

There are specific rules contained in 22 NYCRR Section 202.16(f)(1) regarding attendance at Preliminary Conferences. As required by said court rule, many judges in matrimonial actions require the parties to appear given the emotional, personal nature of the litigation and the need for the parties to participate in the conference and hear from the Judge.

Rules 11-a and 11-d Limitations on interrogatories and depositions.

These rules are contrary to the fundamental principles of broad discovery in matrimonial actions governed by DRL Section 236(B)(4), where the goal is to obtain as much information as possible about the parties' financial circumstances. Additionally, interrogatories are particularly important in cases with self-represented litigants who are better able to access this discovery tool because it is easier and less expensive. In the First and Second Departments, there is no discovery on the issue of grounds, custody or orders of protection absent special circumstances. A limitation on depositions would lead to longer trials and fewer settlements. Certainly, trial judges should have the right to limit discovery if it is a fishing expedition, and for the most part, that has been successful.

Rule 11-b Privilege Logs

Privilege logs are rarely if ever used in matrimonial litigation.

Rule 11e- Responses and Objections to Document Requests

This rule is inapplicable to matrimonial discovery in that broad and complete disclosure is already mandated.

Rule 19-a Motions for Summary Judgment; Statement of Material Facts

Summary judgment motions for the most part are not utilized in contested matrimonial cases.

Rule 20 Temporary Restraining Orders- Copies of Papers

The Committee believes this rule can be useful in matrimonial litigation and recommends the application of this rule with a limitation that only the Order to Show cause portion of the application need be provided in advance and continuing the exception in Uniform Rule 202.7(f) for requests for Orders of Protection. Often in matrimonial litigation, the supporting affidavit is signed at the Courthouse when the papers are submitted. Pre-arranged times for these application with judges and parts where practicable should be encouraged.

Rule 34 Staggered court appearances

The committee notes that most matrimonial judges allow for staggered court appearances as the needs of any case or attorneys dictate. However, given that many matrimonial practitioners also practice in the Family Courts, where in some Counties the cases have specific time requirements and cannot be delayed, the efficacy of this rule would be lost in a matrimonial part. Family Court cases are often scheduled on short notice due to a 1028 or 1029 application or the arrest of a juvenile and take precedence over a divorce case. We believe this calendar management tool should be left to the sound discretion of the judges and local practice.

Rule 21 – Courtesy Copies

Lastly, contrary to the recommendation of the Advisory Committee on Civil Practice, the Committee agrees with Commercial Division's Rule 21 which bars courtesy copies on motions submitted in hard copy and requires courtesy copies on motions submitted by electronic filing. This rule is consistent with the needs and practices of the matrimonial bar and judges generally, but additionally, the Committee believes this can also be left to the discretion of the judge.

Very truly yours,

Jeffrey S. Sunshine

Re: Proposed Adoption of Commercial Division Rule 11-b in Other Courts of Civil Jurisdiction

Mr. McConnell:

We write on behalf of the New York City Law Department (the “Law Department”) in response to the Administrative Board’s Request for Public Comment on the Proposed Adoption of Certain Rules of the Commercial Division in Other Courts of Civil Jurisdiction. The Law Department strongly supports the Advisory Committee’s recommendations to:

1. Adopt the provisions of Commercial Division Rule 11-b that encourage the use of a categorical approach rather than a document-by-document approach to privilege logs; and
2. Eliminate the requirement that attorney-client communications and attorney work product created after the filing of the complaint be included in the privilege log, unless otherwise ordered.

With the proliferation of email and other forms of electronically stored information (“ESI”), the volume of material that litigants must collect, review, and produce during discovery has increased dramatically. As a result, discovery costs in many cases have skyrocketed, particularly when it comes to reviewing documents and asserting privilege. The Sedona Conference recognizes that “[privilege] logging is arguably the most burdensome and time consuming task a litigant faces during the document production process.” 17 Sedona Conf. J. 155, Commentary on Protection of Privileged ESI (2016).

A categorical privilege log permits common documents to be grouped in different classes rather than requiring all the details about each document to be separately logged. Our experience substantially reduce the time and cost of preparing privilege logs in cases with large document productions while continuing to provide sufficient information to the litigants and the courts. The use of categorical logs allows for a more efficient document review process, letting the parties devote more of their resources to identifying and producing relevant documents and less to logging massive amounts of detail that is ordinarily unnecessary.

The Law Department also supports the Committee's recommendation that post-litigation attorney-client communications and attorney work product do not need to be logged unless otherwise ordered by the court. Too often requesting parties are unwilling to agree to limit discovery to documents that predate the complaint and insist that post-litigation attorney-client communications and work product continue to be logged. This, in our view, results in a great deal of inefficiency by forcing the responding party to either contest the issue before the court or undertake the burden and expense of logging an inordinate number of clearly privileged documents that ultimately provide no benefit to the requesting party. It not only wastes valuable court resources, but also interferes with the producing party's ability to quickly and efficiently review and produce documents.

In sum, these two proposals, if enacted, will significantly reduce the costs and burdens of large e-discovery cases without diminishing the utility of the discovery process.

We thank the Administrative Board for this opportunity to comment.

Respectfully submitted,

Zachary W. Carter

Proposed Adoption of Certain Rules of the Commercial Division in Other Courts of Civil Jurisdiction

Dear Mr. McConnell,

On behalf of the Managing Attorneys and Clerks Association, Inc. ("MACA") and its Rules Committee, we write to comment on the Proposed Adoption of Certain Rules of the Commercial Division in Other Courts of Civil Jurisdiction, published October 15, 2018. We welcome this opportunity and thank the Office of Court Administration for soliciting the views of the bar on this important subject.

MACA is comprised of more than 125 law firms with litigation practices (primarily large and mid-sized firms) as well as the Attorney General's Office. Our members' positions within our respective firms and concomitant responsibilities afford us a breadth of understanding of the day to day operations of the various state and federal court systems. In particular, our members have extensive experience with the Statewide Rules of the Commercial Division and as well as practice in non-commercial Parts of the New York Supreme Court.

Agreement with Advisory Committee Recommendations

We generally support consideration of rules that have been tested in the Commercial Division for application in other civil cases, and we agree with the recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Civil Practice to adopt Rules 2 (to the extent of requiring counsel immediately to inform the Court of settlements when a motion is pending or trial date has been set), 3(a) (with the amendment proposed by the Advisory Committee), 3(b), 11-b, 14-a (to the extent of requiring that all decisions or agreements at conferences be reduced to writing and either stipulated to or so ordered), 19-a, 20, 22 (to the extent of its authorization of parties to request oral argument on the face of their motion papers) and 34, substantially for the reasons articulated by the Advisory Committee in its July 2018 Report. We note, however, that we do not support the Advisory Committee's suggestion that Rule 19-a statements be made mandatory for summary judgment motions in all actions; not all judges find them useful and the costs to the parties of preparing such statements may be disproportionate to their value and to the amount in controversy.

Com. Div. Rule 6: Bookmarking

The Advisory Committee declined to recommend adoption of Rule 6 for civil cases outside of the Commercial Division, including its provision for filing bookmarked memoranda and affidavits, on the ground that bookmarking is too burdensome. In our experience, filing an affidavit with its exhibits as a single, bookmarked PDF often is more efficient than filing the affidavit and each exhibit as a separate PDF, as is required for NYSCEF filings outside of the Commercial Division, see NYSCEF User Manual at 16. Accordingly, we recommend that parties in all types of civil actions have the option—but not be required—to file a bookmarked PDF.

Com. Div. Rule 8: Consultation Before Conferences

The Advisory Committee also declined to recommend Rule 8 for application to civil cases outside the Commercial Division. Rule 8 requires counsel to consult about settlement, disclosure, ADR and e-discovery issues prior to conferences. Notably, while Uniform Rule 202.12 specifies that such issues are to be addressed at the preliminary conference, it does not require advance consultation. We recommend that Rule 8's advance consultation requirement be incorporated into Uniform Rule 202.12 because we believe that in all case types the conference process is more efficient when the parties already have conferred to identify points of agreement and what they disagree about—and in some instances, parties can come to agreement through that procedure and end up not having to take up the Court's time with a conference. We note that Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f) requires parties to confer prior to the federal equivalent of the preliminary conference, and in our experience that requirement makes the process of establishing a plan for discovery and other steps in the pre-trial process more efficient.

Com. Div. Rule 11-a: Limitations on Interrogatories

We agree with the Advisory Committee's recommendation that Rule 11-a be adopted for use outside the Commercial Division, but we note that subsection (b) needs to be amended by adding to the list of permitted topics expert disclosure pursuant to CPLR 3101(d)(1). The Advisory Committee has recommended against adoption of Com. Div.

Rule 13(c)'s expert disclosure provisions, and without them a party needs to be able to propound interrogatories pursuant to CPLR 3101(d)(1) in order to be able to prepare for an expert's testimony at trial.

Com. Div. Rule 11-e: Responses & Objections to Document Requests

We also support the adoption of Rule 11-e to apply in other civil cases, but without subsections (c) or (d) of the rule. Subsection (c) requires that the parties agree to a date by which document discovery will be completed, and that they reach such agreement by the commencement of depositions; subsection (d) requires that the producing party certify—for each individual document request—either that production is complete or that the party has no responsive documents. These provisions are widely regarded as unduly burdensome and in our experience parties tend either to stipulate around them or simply to ignore them. We believe that subsection (c) has not appreciably improved the timeliness or orderliness with which pretrial disclosure proceeds in Commercial Division cases. And outside of the Commercial Division, Uniform Rule 202.12(c)(2) already provides for the establishment of a timetable for the completion of various aspects of disclosure, which can be revisited in the course of compliance conferences scheduled pursuant to Uniform Rule 202.12(j).

Subsection (d) of Rule 11-e is disfavored among practitioners because in essence it requires the producing party to prove a negative fact: that there are no more responsive documents. A witness can only represent with personal knowledge what he or she knows, but in the case of negative facts any representation always is subject to the limits of the witness's knowledge. The risks of representing that a document production is complete were famously illustrated by a Florida court in Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc. v. Morgan Stanley & Co., CA 03-5045 AI (Fla. 15th Jud. Cir. Mar. 23, 2005). In Coleman, when a representation that document production was complete was rendered inaccurate by the subsequent identification of additional responsive records that had not been produced, the court granted a default judgment as a sanction (later vacated on appeal). Just as the Advisory Committee concluded that the certification requirement stated in Com. Div. Rule 11-b(d) was unnecessary, given counsel's obligation to conduct privilege reviews in a lawful, reasonable and good faith manner, so too is the certification requirement in Rule 11-e(d) unnecessary to parties' proper performance of their obligations to object or produce under CPLR 3122.

Com. Div. Rule 12: Non-Appearance at Conference

The Advisory Committee found Rule 12 to be duplicative of existing rules and did not recommend its adoption for that reason. We note that Com. Div. Rule 12 goes beyond other rules in its express authorization of the Court to impose an appropriate non-monetary sanction other than those itemized in Uniform Rule 202.27, and that Rule 130–2.1 provides only for monetary sanctions. We believe Justices are best able to enforce compliance with rules when they have flexibility to determine what is likely to be the most effective yet fair sanction in a given situation. Accordingly, we support a rule that recognizes that power in Justices outside of the Commercial Division, and note that amendment of Rule 130–2.1 is likely the most expedient means to that end.

Com. Div. Rule 13(b): Documents Sought as Condition Precedent to Deposition

The Advisory Committee recommends against adoption of this provision for sanctions when records are requested in advance of a deposition but not timely produced, on the ground that CPLR 3127 adequately empowers the Court to address such compliance failures. We disagree. We frequently see litigation delayed when a party unjustifiably fails to produce its documents in advance of its deposition and Rule 13(b) is unique in specifically addressing the problem. The Advisory Committee also saw a potential for problems that could result from application of the rule when the required documents are in the possession of non-parties. The introductory clause of Rule 13(b) could be revised to address that concern: “If a party seeks documents from another party as a condition precedent to a deposition, the documents are not produced by the date fixed and the party of whom they are requested is later determined to have had such documents in its custody or control, the party seeking disclosure may ask . . . .”

Com. Div. Rule 29: Identification of Deposition Testimony

The Advisory Committee did not recommend adoption of this rule because it saw inconsistencies between the rule and CPLR 3117, particularly with regard to use of deposition testimony for impeachment purposes. We agree that deposition testimony should be available to use for impeachment purposes without having to be identified prior to trial, but believe this defect in Rule 29 can easily be remedied with the addition of a sentence to the end of the rule: “The rule shall not be construed in a manner that affects the ability of a party to use deposition testimony at trial in accordance with CPLR 3117(a).” We recommend adoption of Rule 29, with that amendment, for use in other civil matters.

Com. Div. Rule 32: Scheduling of Witnesses

The Advisory Committee did not recommend adoption of this rule on grounds that it would greatly alter New York practice by introducing a pre-trial witness list when the “trial by ambush” it guards against already is adequately regulated. We disagree. We believe that the device of a pre-trial witness list better enables the assigned Justice to manage the trial as well as the rest of his or her court schedule, and similarly assists the parties and their witnesses. We do not see a danger that the Court would cut off a witness’s testimony when it exceeds the estimated length disclosed on the witness list, contrary to the Advisory Committee’s concerns. We recommend adoption of Rule 32 for use in other civil matters.

Revisiting Other Com. Div. Rules

The Advisory Committee observed that a number of the Commercial Division Rules are unnecessary. We believe these findings should prompt a re-evaluation of the burdens associated with those rules and the benefits they confer, because in our experience some of the Commercial Division rules have been more burdensome and/or less beneficial in practice than originally may have been believed; and because, in our experience, extra rules tend to complicate procedure rather than make it more efficient. We believe the following rules are worthy of such review:

- Rule 1: Uniform Rule 202.12(b) already requires counsel to appear at conferences “thoroughly familiar with the action and authorized to act.” It would be more efficient to eliminate from Rule 202.70(g) the language that makes Uniform Rule 202.12 inapplicable to the Commercial Division.
- Rule 2: The Advisory Committee aptly observed that “no purpose would be served” by taking a step in addition to filing discontinuance papers to notify the Part, except when a motion is pending or trial scheduled.
- Rule 4: The Advisory Committee suggested that sending papers by fax is inconsistent with the increasingly prevalent e-filing, and we would note that Uniform Rule 202.5-a is adequate for use in the Commercial Division in cases that are not e-filed; accordingly, Rule 4(a) is superfluous. The Advisory Committee also opined that counsel generally don’t need a rule or other judicial direction to decide among them how to communicate and we agree; Rule 4(b) thus may also be unneeded.
- Rule 6: The Advisory Committee “believe[d] that there is no problem within the court system with regard to papers and their form . . . . There are already rules that seem to work well.” Apart from the issue of bookmarking PDFs discussed above, we agree. We note, moreover, that an OCA rule that purports to supersede a statute, such as CPLR 2101’s provision setting the minimum type size for documents other than the summons at ten point, is of uncertain legal effect. We also believe that Rule 130 is sufficient authority on its own to govern the conduct of parties and their counsel, and that a separate court rule that says Rule 130 applies is superfluous.
- Rule 7: The Advisory Committee believed conferences can be wasteful of parties’ resources, and opposed making this rule applicable outside the Commercial Division. We believe that Rule 7 does not sufficiently differ from Uniform Rule 202.12(b) to warrant a separate rule.
- Rule 10: The Advisory Committee believed that Rule 10’s requirement that counsel file certification that he or she has discussed ADR with the client invades the attorney-client relationship. We believe that the certification is make-work and have observed that the Justices in New York County’s Commercial Division appear to be uninterested in the certification or whether or not it has been made. As for the other information Rule 10 requires, we are not aware of any Commercial Division Justice asking for any of it other than what motions are anticipated. We do not believe that a separate rule is necessary for that purpose; Uniform Rule 202.12(c) can be amended to include anticipated motions and Com. Div. Rule 10 can be eliminated.

- Rules 11, 11-c, 11-f: The Advisory Committee believed each of these rules is superfluous in the face of the CPLR and other provisions of the Uniform Rules. We agree.
- Rule 15: The Advisory Committee believed judicial discretion as to adjourning conferences should remain unfettered. We do not believe Rule 15 articulates a standard that is not already inherent in the assigned Justice's power to manage his or her docket.
- Rule 16: The Advisory Committee did not recommend adoption of this rule governing motion procedures, deeming it superfluous in the face of CPLR 2214 and 3212 and Uniform Rule 202.8. We agree that, if Uniform Rule 202.70(g) did not make Uniform Rule 202.8 inapplicable to Commercial Division matters, Rule 16 would be unnecessary.
- Rule 18: The Advisory Committee did not recommend adoption of this rule governing sur-replies and post-submission papers on the ground that such matters should be left to the judge's discretion. We note in addition that we have not experienced problems with these matters outside of the Commercial Division, which are governed by Uniform Rule 202.8; and that if Uniform Rule 202.70(g) did not make Uniform Rule 202.8 inapplicable to Commercial Division matters, Rule 18 would be unnecessary.
- Rule 21: The Advisory Committee recommended against adoption of this rule on courtesy copies because it viewed the rule as contrary to the goals of paperless e-filing. We find the topic ill-suited to a statewide rule because the requirement of courtesy copies tends to be addressed in local rules in accordance with local preferences and in Part Rules in accordance with the assigned Justice's preferences. Accordingly, Rule 21 seems superfluous.
- Rule 23: The Advisory Committee recommended against adoption of this rule on counsel reminding the Court when it fails to decide a motion within 60 days on grounds that Justices are presumed to know the standards and goals they work against. We agree and add that Rule 23 has been dead letter ever since Uniform Rule 202.8(h) was amended to eliminate its parallel requirement in favor of periodic reports to Justices by the Chief Administrator, effective October 1, 2006. We are not aware that Rule 23 is ever complied with or enforced.

John W. McConnell, Esq.

January 28, 2019

- Rule 25: The Advisory Committee rejected this rule on the scheduling of trial as having the potential to “result in substantial injustice.”
- Rule 32-a: The Advisory Committee highlighted the weakness of direct testimony by affidavit: it is “more likely to result in counsel’s version of the witness’s testimony than that of the witness.” For that reason, we believe presentation of direct testimony by affidavit should be at the discretion of the parties, not the Court.
- Rule 33: The Advisory Committee did not recommend adoption of this rule authorizing the Court to preclude evidence for failure to comply with four other Commercial Division rules because it “is vague and, depending on how it is construed, could lead to substantial injustice.” We note as well that CPLR 3126, upon which Rule 33 purports to be grounded, provides penalties for “fail[ure] to disclose information . . . pursuant to [Article 31 of the CPLR].” The Commercial Division rules to which Rule 33 applies that penalty are not among the matters addressed by Article 31 of the CPLR, however; they are instead rules governing trial exhibits (Rule 28), the presentation to the Court of deposition testimony to be used at trial (Rule 29), pre-trial memoranda, exhibit books and jury questionnaires (Rule 31); and trial witness lists (Rule 32). That legal defect in Rule 33 and the drastic penalties it purports to provide for procedural missteps lead us to question whether the rule should remain in place.

Again, we are grateful for the opportunity to comment on the proposal to adopt some of the Commercial Division Rules for use in other types of civil cases. If the OCA would like elaboration on any of the foregoing, please let us know.

APPENDIX

INTRODUCTION

Despite New York State having more licensed attorneys than any other jurisdiction in the United States, many New Yorkers do not have access to attorneys to assist with their legal problems. This lack of access is acutely felt within New York's rural communities, where the delivery of legal services presents both distinctive challenges and rewards that are largely uninvestigated by our metro-centric bar.

This metro-centrism is a symptom of the following reality: the great majority of New York's licensed attorneys practice in or around urban centers. According to the data, roughly 96% of attorneys practice in metropolitan areas, with the remaining 4% presumably serving New York's mostly rural geography. Compounding this inequitable distribution of attorneys, recent research has brought to light that nearly 75% of current rural practitioners will be retiring from practice in the next 10–30 years, with little to no new attorneys taking their stead. This alarming legal trend is exacerbating the access-to-justice gaps already faced by rural communities.

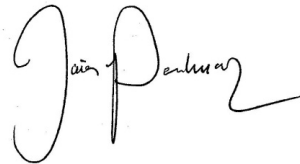

The Task Force on Rural Justice was formed to investigate these legal trends and to propose creative interventions to combat this imminent crisis.<sup>1</sup> We have taken insight from the other jurisdictions that have already been addressing their rural access-to-justice challenges, and now, as a united Task Force, endeavor to advance solutions crafted for New York's own unique jurisdictional needs. The report and recommendations that follow are the culmination of our collective effort to spotlight alarming legal trends, ameliorate the plight of New York's rural attorneys, encourage new attorneys to consider rural practice, and ensure greater access-to-justice for all New Yorkers.

We hope this Report inspires all invested stakeholders to take the necessary action required to avert the rural access-to-justice crisis upon us.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The Task Force on Rural Justice acknowledges Hank Greenberg, President of the New York State Bar Association (NYSBA), for his vision in spearheading the creation of this Task Force and assembling its diverse and knowledgeable members. Staying true to NYSBA's commitment to ensure access-to-justice for all New Yorkers, he created this task force to respond to the shrinking pool of attorneys serving rural communities across the state. Further, our work would not have been possible without our NYSBA liaisons—Katherine Suchocki and Tom Richards—who from start to finish supported us with great dedication to the cause. We would also like to thank the Honorable Elizabeth Garry, the Presiding Justice of the New York State Supreme Court, Appellate Division, Third Department, for her support of this initiative, and for championing the rural-justice cause long before this Task Force formed.

This report builds on an empirical study of lawyers in rural New York spearheaded by Taier Perlman for the Government Law Center at Albany Law School. The Task Force thanks the Government Law Center for sharing the underlying data on which its published study, *Rural Law Practice in New York State*, was based.

The Rural Justice Task Force also acknowledges the many invested stakeholders across the state who graciously and generously shared their time and insights. Special thanks goes to David Kay and Robin Blakely-Armitage from the Cornell Community & Regional Development Institute (CaRDI) who offered expertise in data science, rural demographic trends, and preliminary map-making. The Task Force also thanks ZevRoss Spatial Analysis for creation of the maps, infographics, and tables.

Finally, we acknowledge the many hard-working and dedicated rural practitioners from across the state that reached out to share their stories, comments, and proposals to support the Task Force. Without their tireless self-sacrifice, rural access to justice would just be a concept. These rural practitioners creatively maneuver through myriad challenges to deliver urgently needed legal services. They are justice warriors at the frontlines of the accelerating access-to-justice crisis affecting rural New York.

CONCEPTUAL FRAMEWORK—A PACKAGE OF PROPOSALS

It must be clarified at the onset, that the rural access-to-justice challenges this Task Force was formed to address are largely due to forces beyond the scope of our work. The social, economic, and political circumstances that have brought about the decline of rural communities in New York and other states will not be addressed herein. Further, given that the diverse and complex challenges rural communities face implicate multiple stakeholders, including local and state governments, the Task Force had to take a creative approach when developing our recommendations.

Our recommended interventions fall under five categories—Rural Law Practice, Funding, Broadband and Technology, Law Schools and New Attorneys, and Law and Policy—which in totality make up a package of targeted proposals. These category specific interventions address the diverse and complex challenges rural communities face. Only through such a diversified approach can we meaningfully avert the justice gap crisis that will occur when nearly 75% of present-day rural practitioners retire.

This package of proposals is an invitation to any and all stakeholders invested in rural well-being and access to justice. Our diverse interventions call on the State Bar, the State Legislature, the New York Unified Court System, law schools, and others to take action where action is due. The interventions we discuss in this Report are not mutually exclusive. They each make up a piece of the bigger rural justice puzzle, and advancement of any one of them will make a difference for the rural access-to-justice problems our Task Force set out to address. In laying out these diverse recommendations, we invite the full panoply of stakeholders to help bring them to fruition. It will take the proverbial village to activate all of our recommendations, and the more recommendations we can advance, the better for all.<sup>2</sup>

BACKGROUND & RESEARCH

Readers familiar with the access-to-justice challenges experienced in rural New York may wish to skip this section and begin reading the Task Force recommendations which start at page 15.

I. New York State Attorneys: Where Are They?

According to the ABA National Lawyer Population Survey: Lawyer Population by State, New York is home to the largest concentration of registered attorneys of any jurisdiction in the United States. As of 2018, New York had 179,600 registered attorneys, 155,369 of whom had in-state addresses. The majority of these registered attorneys are based in non-rural counties, so naturally, the organized bar focuses on meeting the needs of this great majority of practitioners. Accordingly, the needs of rural attorneys and access-to-justice challenges are not prioritized. This is documented across all jurisdictions.

The urban clustering of New York attorneys is readily apparent when projected on a map:

Attorney Locations in NYS*

Each dot represents a single attorney based on addresses reported to the Office of Court Administration.<sup>3</sup> The vast majority of New York State attorneys are located in urban centers of the state—Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse, Utica, Albany (Capital Region), and the New York City metropolitan areas. Geographically, however, New York is primarily rural. Of the state’s 62 counties, 44 are considered rural under New York State Executive Law § 481.

It should be briefly noted that defining “rural” is no simple task.<sup>4</sup> The definition shifts depending on the specific data sets being used, and what demographic factors or data units are being analyzed. State and federal agencies define rural differently from each other, and which definition of rural to use in a particular study depends on the context and purpose of the research. In a presentation to the Task Force, Robin Blakely-Armitage, Senior Extension Associate and

<sup>4</sup> See Ruth Igielnik Wieder, Pew Research Center, “Evaluating what makes a U.S. community urban, suburban or rural” (Nov. 22, 2019), <https://medium.com/pew-research-center-decoded/evaluating-what-makes-a-u-s-community-urban-suburban-or-rural-159f9d082842>.

Program Manager at Cornell’s Community and Regional Development Institute, explained that defining rural is largely contextual, and shifts depending on what you are studying. She said that the best general definition of rural is lower population density and limited proximity to a population center.

The Task Force deliberately decided not to get bogged down by the nuance involved in crafting a specific definition of “rural.” For our purposes, we relied on the definition of “rural” in Executive Law § 481, which identifies a county as rural if its population is below 200,000 people. Relying on this definition, the following map visualizes just how rural New York State is:

Rural and Urban Counties in NYS

Rural New York makes up approximately 80% of New York’s land mass, and is home to approximately 17% of New Yorkers, or 3,260,008 people.<sup>5</sup> According to attorney-registration data, there are only 6,176 attorneys serving these vast rural territories. In reality, the number of rural attorneys that actually offer legal services to individual members of the public is much smaller than that statistic indicates, since it is unrealistic to presume that all 6,176 attorneys work in private law practices or legal services organizations. A sizable proportion of these attorneys are district attorneys, government lawyers, members of the judiciary, or employees of private businesses, government or public institutions, none of which offer legal services to the general public. This is corroborated by data from rural county bars. For example, the Delaware County Bar Association has a total of 71 members. However only 26 of them maintain a primary solo practice office in the county. Seventeen members are employed by the government, and the other 28 members are not offering legal services to the general public.<sup>6</sup> It is safe to conclude that less than 4% of New York licensed attorneys actually serve the access-to-justice gaps that exist in rural communities.<sup>7</sup>

Without a doubt, there are far fewer attorneys serving rural counties than urban ones. But are there too few? The uneven distribution of attorneys across New York State does not necessarily demonstrate an attorney shortage, particularly when we would expect there to be less attorneys in areas where there are less people. The question is whether there are enough attorneys per resident to meet the need, and in rural New York, there usually are not, as the following section shows.

II. Evidence of Rural Attorney Shortages

Not Just a New York Problem

Research across jurisdictions documents the growing shortage of attorneys throughout rural America. For instance, a recent publication titled Legal Deserts: A Multi-State Perspective on Rural Access to Justice summarized research on rural attorney shortages across five states—California, Georgia, Maine, Minnesota, South Dakota, and Wisconsin.<sup>8</sup> Data studies of rural attorney shortages have also been done in other jurisdictions including Arkansas, Montana, and Utah.<sup>9</sup>

<sup>6</sup> The Delaware County Bar Association statistics were shared with us by Task Force Member Gary A. Rosa on August 2, 2019. Similar figures come from other rural county bar associations. For example, the Madison County Bar Association has 86 members. 27 are court staff, agency attorneys, or lawyers who are members but do not practice law in the county. Of the 59 remaining, 5 are employed half time as government attorneys. Also, only 3 attorneys are under the age of 40. These figures were reported to us by Gemma Rossi Corbin on July 22, 2019. Corbin served as Madison County Bar Association President from 2016 to 2017.

<sup>7</sup> The facial inadequacy of the numbers in illuminating just how many rural practitioners actually serve rural legal needs was demonstrated in a rural practitioner survey that was conducted from August to October 2018 by Albany Law School's Government Law Center. Hundreds of survey responses had to be dropped from the analyzed data set because they were completed by rural practitioners who did not offer legal services to the general public. See Taier Perlman, Rural Law Practice in New York State, endnote 5 (Gov't Law Center, Apr. 16, 2019), available at <https://www.albanylaw.edu/centers/government-law-center/the-rural-law-initiative/Documents/rural-law-practice-in-new-york-state.pdf>.

Rev. 235 (Summer 2016); Utah study: David McNeill, Measuring the Legal Services Market in Utah, Vol. 30 No. 5 Utah Bar J. 22 (Sept/Oct 2017).

The California studies are especially relevant, because California is similar to New York. It has the largest population of any state; it has the second highest count of registered attorneys; and its attorneys practice mostly in large metro-areas, even though the state is predominately rural. The California Commission on Access to Justice published a report in July 2019 spotlighting attorney shortages in California’s rural territories.<sup>10</sup> That study documented the same attorney distribution trends as New York, including the problematic attorney deserts that exist in rural communities.

The New York Problem

While many studies have been done examining workforce shortages across rural New York, no one entity has specifically studied legal workforce shortages until the Government Law Center at Albany Law School published its seminal Rural Law Practice in New York State Report in April 2019.<sup>11</sup> This detailed report, based on a three-month survey of rural practitioners, revealed a number of telling legal trends affecting rural communities. The report provided qualitative and quantitative data about what rural practice is like as well as the rewards and challenges of rural practice. Most significantly, it documented the growing shortage of rural attorneys based on several indicators—difficulties rural attorneys have making referrals in their geographic region, feeling overwhelmed by the volume of cases they are handling, and the greying of the rural bar due to a shortage of new attorneys. The below section focuses on the later indicator, which is what has prompted many jurisdictions to action.

A. The Greying Rural Bar

The Government Law Center’s survey reported an alarming figure: 74.3% of respondents were 45 years or older, with 54% at or near retirement age. This means that within 10 to 30 years, the majority of current rural attorneys will be fully retired. The gravity of these figures was colored by comments from the respondents:

“I am the only lawyer handling complex business transactions. I am 69 years old and cannot retire because too many people rely on me.”

“While there are currently enough attorneys to go around, most are in their 60s, which means many will probably retire in 10-20 years. There may be a crisis in the future, just look at the age of the attorneys.”

“We are running out of lawyers! Something needs to be done to attract young attorneys to the rural areas . . . Our county is literally running out of lawyers.”

Based on these findings, the Task Force took a deeper look at the composition of rural practitioners. Using attorney registration data, we worked with data scientists to compare how many rural attorneys are newly admitted compared to those that have been in practice for quite some time.

The following map shows each attorney that was admitted to the bar between 2014 and 2018:

Attorneys Admitted in 2014-2018

Like attorneys generally, newly admitted attorneys are heavily concentrated in New York’s urban counties. An overlay of attorneys that have been admitted since 1988 or before—representing attorneys that have been in practice for 30 plus years—shows a remarkable effect:

Attorneys Admitted by Year in NYS

The older generation of attorneys are much more numerous and spread out across New York’s rural territories. They also clearly outnumber the newly admitted attorneys that are settling in rural areas. This attorney age imbalance was also documented in the Government Law Center’s survey, albeit qualitatively:

“This county has no public defender office; all indigent legal defense is 18-b. We are running out of defense attorneys who are willing/able to take cases because more attorneys are retiring or leaving the area than those coming in to replace them.”

“I get the impression sometimes that young attorneys are coming out of law school with so much debt that they do not feel they can come to our small villages.”

“Attracting and retaining young lawyers to work in rural areas is one of the biggest challenges I face as a rural practitioner.”

Many more commenters likewise expressed concern about the shortage of newer attorneys and the dim prospects once currently practicing attorneys retire.

The following graph compares the proportions of older and newer attorneys in urban and rural counties and corroborates the anecdotal knowledge:

As the chart makes clear, newer attorneys in rural areas are much more heavily outnumbered by late-career attorneys than newer attorneys in urban areas.

B. Attorney-to-Resident Ratios

When we compare resident-to-attorney ratios across the state, we see a significant imbalance of attorneys in rural areas compared to urban or suburban areas as measured on a per capita basis. The below map uses population data and attorney-registration data to compute the resident-to-attorney ratio, giving an average of how many people there are for each attorney in that area. The darker areas are where there are more residents per attorney.

Residents Per Attorney in NYS

As the map shows, rural areas across the state have higher resident-per-attorney ratios. This is in stark contrast to more urban areas of the state which have much better ratios—for each attorney there are 1 to 40 residents. In many rural areas, however, for each attorney there are 201+ residents. This explains the challenges rural practitioners reported about overwhelming volume of cases and difficulties making referrals to legal experts in their geographic region.<sup>12</sup>

C. Challenges in Rural Practice

As noted above, rural law practice presents unique challenges (and rewards).<sup>13</sup> The rural-practitioner survey conducted by the Government Law Center at Albany Law School illuminated the following eight themes which make rural law practice difficult<sup>14</sup>:

<sup>12</sup> The disparity in the rural and urban attorney-to-resident ratios is perhaps more clearly visualized by the infographic in Appendix C, which plots the attorney-to-resident ratios by county.

<sup>13</sup> The Government Law Center's survey also revealed a number of rewards to rural practice, which are important to appreciate for full understanding of rural law practice. The rewards survey respondents discussed include: love for an impact on their community; reward of helping their clients in meaningful ways; reward of helping underserved poor clients; quality of life in rural communities; and appreciation for type of practice, the local bar community, and relationships with the courts.

<sup>14</sup> Id. at 6. Readers are encouraged to refer to Government Law Center's report, which is available at <https://www.albanylaw.edu/centers/government-law-center/the-rural-law-initiative>, for more details.

1. Prevalence of indigent clients
2. Financial stress on lawyers
3. Professional isolation
4. Overwhelming caseload/not enough attorneys to assist
5. Systemic inefficiencies
6. Distance burdens
7. Technology issues
8. Conflicts of interest/knowing too many people in small communities

The Task Force considered these difficulties in devising its interventions, and several of our recommendations address these difficulties from multiple angles. For instance, one of the bigger challenges faced by rural practitioners relates to the non-uniform and scattered nature of the town and village court system in New York State, also known as justice courts. There are presently 1,197 active justice courts in New York State:<sup>15</sup>

<sup>15</sup> Data provided by the New York State Office of Justice Court Support. The Office of Justice Court Support was formed in 2007 as part of an initiative to improve the efficiency and quality of local town and village courts. The Office supports the work of the justice courts by delivering legal assistance, training, equipment, and services to the justices and court clerks.

Active rural practitioners have to travel tremendous distances to appear in these scattered courts, which typically only hold court during night hours one-to-several times a month. Steuben County in western New York, for example, has 34 justice courts, and Franklin County in northern New York has 20. See maps in Appendix D. The tally of justice courts in Steuben County does not account for the county’s five state-run courts, which sit in three different cities, or the federal district court that has jurisdiction over Steuben County, which has its courthouse two counties away, in Rochester.<sup>16</sup> This overwhelming tapestry of courts, no doubt adds to the challenges that rural practitioners experience.

The Rural Justice Task Force did not go further in studying justice courts, especially since several NYSBA task forces have already done so.<sup>17</sup> However, the impact of this court system on rural practice could not be ignored, and accordingly, several of the proposed interventions address the challenges of practicing in these courts.

We now move on to the recommended interventions of the Task Force which begins on the following page.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE NYSBA TASK FORCE ON RURAL JUSTICE

(A summary of all the recommendations is located in Appendix F)

I. FUNDING-RELATED INTERVENTIONS

A. Funding Is Crucial to Attract Rural Practitioners

As this report shows, the serious shortage of lawyers in rural New York is amply demonstrated not only through metrics, but also anecdotally. Therefore, one focus of this Task Force has been on ways to incentivize new attorneys to practice their skills in these underserved areas.

One concrete approach involves providing financial assistance in exchange for a certain time commitment to practice in a targeted rural area. There are a number of possible models, discussed below, to achieve this. The student-debt crisis is not only real, but growing. “Economists project an accumulated student loan debt of $2 trillion by 2021, and, at a growth rate of 7% a year, as much as $3 trillion or more by the end of the next decade.”<sup>18</sup> Of course, this crisis has caused a wide range of pernicious impacts. “Studies show that many of those struggling to repay these mountainous student loans are also experiencing serious mental health problems, caused in large part by the crushing weight of these loans.”<sup>19</sup> Indeed, this crisis has profoundly impacted the choice of where one chooses to practice law, as the benefits of rural practice are often far outweighed by financial concerns as urban practice is often far more lucrative. It is within this vexing context that we have considered and now recommend the following ameliorative economic strategies.

The Task Force considered several different programs before endorsing the following approaches, ranked in order from most to least preferred.

B. Establish a Direct Pay Model

Our first proposal is that New York State adopt a program similar to the South Dakota Legal Education for Public Service and Rural Practice Loan Repayment Assistance Program.<sup>20</sup> The general idea of this model is to provide money to certain attorneys, making rural practice feasible and more appealing by removing, or at least diminishing, the specter of student-loan debt when establishing a practice or entering into governmental service in a rural area.

Direct-pay models are a preferred method to incentivize rural practice because, compared to other interventions such as tax relief and law school scholarships, the direct pay model affords the following benefits:

- By allowing flexibility, it is scalable and provides a tangible benefit.

- The ability to operate as a pilot program for a limited number of years.
- The ability to direct the benefit to the rural areas that are the focus of this report.
- Avoiding the criticism that tax policy is not the best place to implement social policy.

The South Dakota program provides direct payment to attorneys in certain defined rural communities. The attorneys are paid $12,500 per year for 5 years. The funding is provided as follows: 50% from the court system, 35% from the county (or the county and city combined) and 15% from the South Dakota Bar Association (a mandatory bar association).

The following proposals are based upon the South Dakota model but are somewhat different as the demographic landscape in New York differs significantly from South Dakota. Thus, the Task Force has modified the South Dakota model in significant ways to fit our needs in New York. Some of the details of our plan, which are highly flexible, are as follows:

1. New York State Direct Pay Model

Eligible Areas: Counties with population densities less than 100 per square mile and outside of the corporate boundaries of a city.<sup>21</sup>

This would include the following counties, listed in order of decreasing population density: Cortland, Tioga, Columbia, Oswego, Cayuga, Seneca, Chautauqua, Sullivan, Washington, Greene, Clinton, Steuben, Warren, Wyoming, Yates, Wayne, Jefferson, Otsego, Cattaraugus, Chenango, Schuyler, Orleans, Schoharie, Allegany, Herkimer, St. Lawrence, Delaware, Franklin, Lewis, Essex, and Hamilton.

Alternate Eligible Areas: Counties with lawyer densities less than two lawyers per 1,000 population and outside the corporate boundaries of a city.<sup>22</sup>

This would include all of the counties described above, with the exception of Hamilton, Warren, Columbia, and Sullivan counties, and adding Oneida, Ontario, Genesee, Chemung, Montgomery, Livingston, Madison, and Fulton counties.

Amount of annual benefit: An amount equal to the average published annual in-state tuition rate and mandatory fees for the accredited SUNY law schools, CUNY School of Law, and School of Law at the University at Buffalo. Currently, that average is $22,148.

Benefit Period: We recommend a five-year benefit period and justify that period, as it is longer than a traditional three-year law school program, because this time period allows the attorney to:

- Become firmly established in the community.
- Helps to repay tuition of more expensive schools.

<sup>22</sup> New York Lawyer Report: How many lawyers per resident in each county in New York State?, Press Connects (May 14, 2018), <https://www.pressconnects.com/story/news/local/2018/05/14/new-york-lawyer-report-how-many-lawyers-per-resident-each-county-new-york-state/545197002/>.

- Helps to repay room and board.
- Helps to repay interest.

Eligible Applicant: We propose an Eligible Applicant would be any person not currently employed in an Eligible Area, who has not previously participated in the Direct Pay Model Program and who:

- Is admitted to practice law in the State of New York.
- Has never been disbarred, suspended, or publicly censured from the practice of law in any jurisdiction.
- Is willing to sign a contract to practice in the selected Eligible Area for the length of the Benefit Period.
- Will carry malpractice insurance during their involvement in the program and provide proof thereof.
- Has in excess of $100,000 in combined debt, including debt incurred in undergraduate and graduate programs.

Method of Selection: The application process will be designed, coordinated, and overseen by the New York State Bar Association (NYSBA). Applicants are to apply based upon their intended Eligible Area and selections per Eligible Area are to be made by way of a lottery. Final selections will be limited to the number of authorized awards each year. These awards will be made in rolling order from lowest population density/lawyer density (depending on definition of Eligible Area) to highest.

Number of Annual Awards: Seven awards annually over five years would potentially put 35 attorneys into the underserved rural counties, which we believe is enough to begin to make a significant difference.

Funding: State funding. To be made annually in a lump sum after the completion of each contract year.

2. Direct Pay Loan Repayment Assistance for the Rural Lawyer

We recommend this program as an alternative to the above, which is similar in scope and eligibility to the Direct Pay Model, but differs in that assistance would be directed to the attorneys' student loan payments, which would either be abated in whole or in part during the award period.

C. Student Loan Repayment Programs

We recommend that NYSBA promote existing loan-repayment-assistance programs. First, the College Cost Reduction Act of 2007 created a federal program, administered by the U.S. Department of Education through subcontractors, which was designated to benefit both attorneys and non-attorneys in urban and rural areas. It provides for income-based repayment plans. And, for those with high debts and low incomes, federal loans qualifying for income-based repayments are structured so that payments are capped at a certain percentage of the borrower's income, with the remainder forgiven after 25 years.

The same Act created a program known as Public Service Loan Forgiveness, a more accelerated loan-forgiveness program for those who work in public service for a cumulative ten-year period. At the end of ten years, or after having made 120 qualifying payments while working in public service, the remainder of a federal direct-consolidation loan is forgiven.

There are significant problems with the administration of this program, and upwards of 90% of those applying for loan forgiveness following the ten-year period have had their applications for loan forgiveness denied. On April 3, 2019, six U.S. senators wrote to the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau and outlined problematic areas regarding the administration of the program. On October 28, 2019, 22 U.S. senators wrote to the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau requesting that it immediately open an enforcement investigation into the Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance Agency's management of this program. The Pennsylvania agency is a U.S. Department of Education subcontractor.

In addition, in July 2019, the American Federation of Teachers (AFT) and individual plaintiffs filed a lawsuit in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, Weingarten v DeVos, which challenges practices by the United States Department of Education that are contributing to the low rates of forgiveness currently being granted. These include claims of due process violations including the lack of notice regarding denials and processes for appealing denials.

Given this scenario, we further recommend that NYSBA engage in advocacy efforts to ensure proper administration of this program. NYSBA should do so through its Committee on Legal Aid and President's Committee on Access to Justice, both of which have subcommittees working on loan repayment issues and both of which have in the past recommended that this program be a federal legislative priority for NYSBA.

Second, the New York State District Attorney and Indigent Legal Services Attorney Loan Forgiveness Program is administered by the New York State Higher Education Services Corporation and is designed to retain experienced attorneys employed as district attorneys, assistant district attorneys, or indigent legal services attorneys throughout New York State. Again, attorneys may apply for this program from both urban and rural areas of the state. This is a retention program designed to keep people in these positions longer term. To be eligible, attorneys must have worked in these positions for at least four years, but no more than nine years. Awards are in the amount of $3,400 each year with a cap of $20,400 for each attorney. We recommend that the amount of the award be raised to $5,500 per year and that the wait time to access this program be decreased from four years to two years, and that NYSBA advocate for pending bills on topic.<sup>23</sup> We further recommend that the program be more widely publicized by NYSBA.

Third, we also recommend that NYSBA publicize the Legal Services Corporation's Herbert S. Garten Loan Repayment Assistance Program which provides loan repayment assistance to select attorneys who work full time for Legal Services Corporation (hereinafter LSC) grantees throughout the United States, regardless of whether a program serves urban or rural areas. Six LSC grantees serve the counties outside of the five New York City boroughs and are headquartered in Albany, Buffalo, Geneva, Hempstead, Utica, and White Plains. Selected attorneys receive up to $5,600 annually for a maximum period of three years.

D. Tuition Assistance Programs

The Task Force also recommends that the Excelsior Program administered by the Higher Education Services Corporation be expanded to cover eligible students who wish to practice law in rural areas.

The Excelsior program, in combination with other student-financial-aid programs, allows students to attend a SUNY or CUNY college tuition-free, if they agree to work in New York State upon graduation. We recommend that consideration be given to establishing a similar program to develop a pipeline from high school to college to law school for rural high-school students who commit to return to their rural locations to work upon graduation from law school.

A model similar to this one has been established in Nebraska. In that program, students from certain Nebraska areas study at one of three Nebraska state colleges or universities, obtain their legal education at Nebraska College of Law, and then practice in rural areas throughout the state. Program benefits include full-tuition scholarships for undergraduate education, automatic acceptance into the law school, and eligibility for loan forgiveness after completion of law school. The high-school students must come from a rural section of Nebraska and must agree to return to that same rural area to practice law. Additionally, academic requirements must be met and maintained throughout college and law school. We envision that the establishment of a model such as this in New York would require partnership with University at Buffalo Law School and/or CUNY School of Law.

II. LAW SCHOOLS AND NEW ATTORNEYS INTERVENTIONS

Law schools play an important role in ensuring access to legal services in rural communities. This section of the report identifies several strategies for law schools seeking to do more.

Law schools help rural communities obtain access to justice in two ways: directly, when law-school students, faculty, and staff provide legal services to people in rural communities; and indirectly, when law schools train the attorneys who will serve those communities. This section of the report recommends that law schools assess their programs in both areas in terms of their impact on rural justice.

A. Assessment of Existing and Potential Programs

The first strategy available to law schools is to undertake an assessment of existing and potential programs in terms of their prospects for helping to promote rural access to justice. We recommend that law schools assess how their current programs serve the interests of people in rural communities and students who might choose to practice in rural communities.

Such assessment could be done on a schoolwide basis, but could also be done program-by-program. For example, a specific clinic could assess how many of their clients live in rural communities and whether a future expansion could make more services available to those communities. A law-school office that hosts panel discussions about careers could assess how many of its guest speakers practice in rural communities.

Assessments of this kind could be built into other strategic-planning processes. For example, if a school is undertaking an institution-wide strategic-planning process, one committee or planning group could be tasked with focusing on rural justice. The same task could be assigned within a department that is undertaking a strategic-planning process. Law schools or departments within law schools can identify specific goals for programs that serve rural communities and/or students who are interested in rural practice.

There are also less formal opportunities to incorporate rural justice into strategic planning. For example, job vacancies can be an opportunity for thinking about priorities; hiring a new admissions director is an opportunity to ask candidates about how they would reach out to prospective students from rural communities.

It should be emphasized that assessments of this kind should not be aimed at ensuring “balance” between rural communities and urban or suburban communities. Some law schools, depending on factors like whether they are located near rural communities, have good reason to emphasize rural practice to a greater extent than other schools. Moreover, all communities have access-to-justice needs, and every law school has students who have the potential to do great things in rural, urban, and suburban communities. The goal of assessment and strategic planning, then, should be to identify opportunities for growing schools’ capacity to serve rural communities and the students who might wish to serve them, not to take focus away from the needs of other communities.

Assessments of the kind recommended above depend on information, but at this point little information is available about the impact of law-school programs on rural communities and students who might wish to serve them. Thus, gathering data is an important part of the assessment process.

Again, departments within law schools can gather data separately or together: admissions offices can collect data about their own recruitment efforts in rural areas, and the outcome of those efforts; careers offices can collect data about employers and students to learn more about where jobs are located and how attitudes toward rural practice affect students’ career choices; alumni offices can survey alums in rural communities about the skills needed to prepare for practice in those areas and schools’ outreach to people in their communities; and so on. Gathering information about the impact of programs on rural communities and students who are interested in serving them is an important precursor to meaningful strategic planning.

B. Law Schools' Role in Providing Services

The simplest way for law schools to address the shortage of legal services—although not necessarily the most effective in the long term—is for the law schools to provide legal services themselves. Every law school supports numerous programs in which students, sometimes with the help of significant faculty and school resources, directly provide services to people in their communities. These services fall into a number of overlapping categories.

One major category is services that students receive academic credit for providing. The rise in experiential education over the last few decades has created numerous ways for law students to provide services to their communities, including clinics, externships, internships, and other curricular options. One example of a rural-focused program of this kind is the Drake Agricultural Law Center.<sup>24</sup>

In addition, students participate in pro bono programs. Albany Law School students, for example, provided a total of 42,000 hours of pro bono work in 2018, with some students providing more than 750 hours, or nearly 19 weeks of full-time service.<sup>25</sup> (No data is available on how much of that service was provided to rural communities.)

Pro bono work is not optional in New York; the state court system requires that all students complete 50 hours of pro bono service before they are admitted to the bar.<sup>26</sup> The regulation defines “pro bono service” as “assist[ing] in the provision of legal services without charge,” which allows students to count work for which they receive academic credit (such as clinical work) as pro bono service. Work that counts as pro bono service can thus be provided either as part of a curricular program, like a clinic, or as an extracurricular activity or part of an outside job.

Direct-services programs take many forms. Many law schools provide institutional support for students' pro bono work. Not all student pro bono work involves direct services; a different kind of service is provided by the Legislative Research Service of the Rural Law Center at the University of Wyoming College of Law, which involves student volunteers providing free legislative research and drafting services.

Another creative program is the Justice Bus program in Buffalo. This program is an initiative of Neighborhood Legal Services, joined by community partners including Volunteer Lawyers Project, the Western New York Law Center, and the University at Buffalo School of Law. The project is a 12-passenger van that transports lawyers and law students to rural areas of Western New York to provide services to poor and disabled people.<sup>27</sup>

While some programs are supervised by law school staff and faculty—which is costly for the law schools—others involve outside placement of students. These programs are variously known as internships, externships, or field placements, and all of them involve primary supervision of the students providing services by attorneys in practice, rather than law school faculty or staff. There appear to be more programs of this kind supporting rural areas than faculty or staff-run programs.

Are law schools' direct-services programs an important way to address the shortage of legal services in rural communities? It is clear that service providers within law schools can become important resources within their communities. For example, the Farmworkers Clinic at Cornell and the Immigration Law Clinic at Albany Law School serve not only as significant providers of legal services but as hubs through which people in need of legal services are put in contact with attorneys who can provide those services. But their scope is limited in several ways: students spend longer on cases than experienced attorneys, and require supervision; clinics generally pick one kind of case (like immigration) and serve only clients with needs relating to that subject; and clinics are geographically limited because there are only four law schools in upstate New York (above Westchester County): Albany, Buffalo, Cornell, and Syracuse. Also, clinics are by far the most expensive educational program run by law schools, which makes it challenging to expand them.

One potential benefit of law students' direct-service work is that, in addition to helping the recipients of the services, it also exposes students to practice in rural communities. But there is good reason to be skeptical of experiential education's potential for motivating students to work in rural communities. Students' experiences in clinics involve working with very specific clienteles in narrow legal areas. This is very different from most rural law practice, in which a majority of lawyers are general practitioners working in solo practice or small firms. A farmworkers' clinic may give students excellent exposure to the life of farmworkers, but it will give them little insight into the life of rural lawyers. In this sense, direct-services programs' primary benefit is the services themselves.

One important consideration for programs that provide direct services is their relationship to other service providers. Ideally, the programs will complement and cooperate with existing service providers, rather than displacing them or competing for funding.

In sum, it is important for law schools to assess their direct-services programs with an open mind. While they have the potential to contribute significantly to the needs of their communities, law schools' role in producing future lawyers affects rural communities on a much greater scale.

C. Law Schools' Role in Providing Attorneys

Although law schools can usefully serve their communities by providing direct services, their greater impact is training the lawyers who will go on to serve rural communities.

Without wading into complex questions of curriculum design, the Task Force recommends that schools assess their curricula with an eye towards the needs of lawyers who will practice in rural communities. In the substantive legal training that law schools provide—that is, the courses they teach—the schools can (and many do) make an effort to give students the skills and training they need to succeed in rural practice. This includes both substantive courses and skills-based courses like practice management. And although there is much debate within law schools about the idea that graduates should be “practice-ready”—given the diversity of legal practices—there is a growing movement to teach classes on practice management and other classes that will be particularly useful for rural lawyers.<sup>28</sup>

It is also worth noting that law schools nationally are expanding online education.<sup>29</sup> This presents a potential opportunity for students who might consider rural practice, because prospective students in rural communities, especially those with limited resources, might find distance learning more manageable. Law schools considering such programs should assess their capacity for making law school more accessible to people in rural areas.

Outside of the curriculum training law schools provide, there are several important strategies for supporting students who might wish to practice in rural communities. Three of them include: increasing students' access to information about rural practice; working to challenge the prestige hierarchy which devalues rural practice; and growing the pipeline to rural practice by recruiting more students from rural communities.

1. Increasing students' access to information about rural practice

One important way law schools can support students who might wish to practice in rural communities is by helping them learn more about rural practice through mentoring, informational, and connection-building programs. Lack of information should not be a barrier to serving communities that need legal services.

Ideally, law students would never miss out on a possible career choice because they are unable to obtain information about it. But information about rural careers can be scarce. Every law school has an office responsible for helping students learn about careers, and those offices are increasingly conceiving of their function in a broader way—hence the phrase “professional development” increasingly being incorporated into the names of those offices. As these offices help students build their professional identity and their career goals, they have an opportunity to introduce them to the significant opportunities that may exist in rural communities—or to reinforce the unfortunate message that such opportunities are not worth pursuing.

Professional Development offices can bring in guest speakers or organize informational sessions to help students learn about rural practice. They can engage in outreach to rural employers, who (lacking large human-resources offices) may be less knowledgeable about how to make their job openings known to law schools. One innovative program is the Iroquois “Take a Look” program—a healthcare-related program which takes downstate doctors on tours of upstate areas to entice them to move and work upstate.<sup>30</sup> To the extent that lack of information about upstate living is an obstacle to choosing rural practice, simple exposure can be very powerful.

Professional Development offices can also encourage students, during mentoring sessions, to consider rural options. Of course, many offices do just this; the Task Force’s recommendation is simply that such offices assess their work to see whether their students are missing opportunities.

Professional Development offices are not the only offices within a law school that can help students learn more about rural practice. Alumni offices, for example, may sponsor mentoring programs that connect law students to attorneys in practice, and those offices can make sure to reach out to attorneys in rural communities for mentoring programs. Likewise, student-services offices can encourage students to form affinity groups on campus. Every office that works directly with students can assess their programs to determine whether they are serving students who might wish to practice in rural communities.

For each program in this category, questions for assessment should include:

- Whether the program helps eliminate informational barriers to rural practice (in other words, make sure that students do not eschew rural practice because of a lack of accurate information);
- Whether it makes it easier for students interested in rural practice to overcome the cultural devaluing of rural practice within law schools;
- Whether it helps students make connections with attorneys in rural practice who can help them establish a practice there.

2. Perceived Prestige of Rural Jobs

One important way law schools can make a long-term difference is by working to change the way rural practice is perceived by students. There is a perceived prestige hierarchy of jobs in law schools, and rural practice, because it involves small towns and small firms, can be seen as low in that hierarchy. Law schools could do more to change the cultural perception of rural work, to spread the understanding that—as Professor Hannah Haksgaard has written—“Private practice legal work in rural areas is public interest work.”<sup>31</sup>

Law professors and law-school staff frequently send implicit messages about the legal profession when they talk about successful lawyers (and identify certain lawyers as successful); when they talk about jobs (and identify certain jobs as desirable); and when they talk about the rewards they themselves find in their own work.

As many scholars have noted, prestige in the legal profession tends to be associated with urban practice, large firms, male lawyers, and representation of institutions rather than individuals.<sup>32</sup> It is important for professors and staff at law schools to challenge this prestige hierarchy and speak about the value of small-town and small-firm practice. The Government Law Center’s data clearly shows that many lawyers thrive in rural practice because of benefits that are simply unavailable in large firms and large metropolitan practices, such as deep connections with close-knit communities. Professors and staff should endeavor to make clear to students that practice of this kind has more value than traditional prestige hierarchies acknowledge.

3. Growing the Pipeline to Rural Communities

Finally, one of the most important ways law schools can help rural communities is by recruiting applicants from those communities. As the Task Force spoke to rural lawyers, we heard a strong consensus that the new lawyers most likely to stay in rural communities were those who had connections to those communities, particularly those who had grown up in them. That being the case, it is extremely important to make sure that college students in rural communities—and even high-school students—are fully aware of the availability of legal careers.

One exemplary program in this regard is Washburn School of Law’s Rural Legal Practice Initiative, a partnership with undergraduate schools that helps pre-law students learn about legal career opportunities in rural communities.<sup>33</sup> Albany Law School, too, is reaching out to undergraduate students in rural communities through its partnership with SUNY Cobleskill. Many students who attend rural schools do not have family members who practice law and may never consider law school unless they encounter outreach or role models.

While there is no doubt that law schools in today’s climate are aggressively recruiting students from all geographic regions, admissions offices can nonetheless usefully assess their own outreach efforts in rural communities. Faculty, too, can contribute to awareness of the possibility of legal careers by guest-teaching classes at rural schools, including high schools. Students in rural communities should not miss out on the possibility of a legal career simply because they are not exposed to that possibility.

III. RURAL LAW PRACTICE INTERVENTIONS

A. Introduction

The great majority of rural lawyers in New York are solo practitioners or members of small firms, are over age 45, serve clients of modest means, and there are not nearly enough lawyers in rural areas to meet residents' needs.<sup>34</sup> To achieve rural justice, the bar must find creative ways to lure lawyers and judges to come to, or remain in, rural communities. To this end, the Task Force makes six recommendations: (1) to relax residency requirements that compromise the ability of rural employers to find talent and of rural lawyers to thrive; (2) to increase rates for assigned counsel to fairly compensate attorneys; (3) to raise the low jurisdictional limits in small claims court, which can undermine the ability of rural New Yorkers to achieve justice; (4) to consider law school loan forgiveness programs that could enable more attorneys to settle in rural communities; (5) to eliminate will filing fees; and (6) for NYSBA to offer discounted CLE rates to rural attorneys and free consultations and/or expanded programming to support lawyers in transition.

B. Legislative Action

1. Raise 18-B rates

Extensive advocacy has occurred around stagnant hourly rates paid to assigned counsel in criminal and Family Court cases. The Task Force does not recommend further study, but instead discusses the particular impact of the assigned counsel rates on rural attorneys, rural New Yorkers entitled to mandated representation, and rural justice. In 2018, the State Bar embraced a report of the Criminal Justice Section and Committee on Mandated Representation, calling for a rate increase. Most recently, this goal has been declared a 2020 legislative priority of the Association.<sup>35</sup>

An Interim Report to Chief Judge Janet DiFiore, issued by the Commission on Parental Legal Representation in February 2019, recommended that the rates for parental representation increase to $150 an hour.<sup>36</sup> In her State of the Judiciary Message in 2019, the Chief Judge advocated for an increase in assigned counsel rates for criminal defendants, parents, and children, and stated that she had transmitted a letter to Governor Cuomo and leaders of the Legislature urging action. She further explained:

<sup>35</sup> The last increase in assigned counsel rates was in 2004, when rates went to $75 per hour regarding felonies and $60 per hour for representation of a person charged with a misdemeanor or lesser offense. After 16 years, these rates should be increased to prevent the further exodus of practitioners from the assigned counsel program across the state.

New York State has made great progress to strengthen its criminal indigent defense system thanks to the creation of the Office of Indigent Legal Services...and to increased state funding...However, our state continues to rely on the hundreds of private attorneys or assigned counsel who provide legal representation to indigent criminal defendants and family court litigants in many areas of the state. Without fair and adequate compensation for these attorneys, a vital component of the system is at risk.<sup>37</sup>

The success of the criminal defense reforms contemplated by the Legislature depends on the availability of enough qualified attorneys. A survey of assigned counsel plan administrators conducted by the Committee on Mandated Representation revealed that a significant number of programs do not have enough attorneys because the fees are too low. The impact of inadequate rates—and a resulting shortage of qualified private attorneys willing to accept assigned cases—is felt acutely in rural counties. In such areas, fewer institutional offices exist to handle mandated representation cases. Thus, assigned counsel attorneys play a particularly significant role in protecting the rights of New Yorkers accused of crimes, as well as Family Court litigants and children. Increased rates are vital to sustaining such representation. The key role played by assigned counsel in rural criminal defense was underscored by a report of the NYSBA Criminal Justice Section on Town and Village Justice Courts.<sup>38</sup>

A survey of rural attorneys revealed the importance of raising rates, as exemplified by these comments:

“My clients cannot afford my services, and I cannot sustain a practice on only 18-B representation, as those fees are too low.”

“Clients cannot afford lawyers for the criminal and family cases...and therefore lawyers often take on assigned cases to supplement income, but assigned cases do not pay well, and it is easy to become overloaded with assignments. We need to encourage more young people to move into rural counties, and mentors in diverse areas of law to dedicate time to teaching [these young lawyers]...We also need to increase pay for assigned counsel and allow practitioners to decline assignments once they’ve maxed out their caseload.”

“Clients are very poor, as this is an economically depressed area. It is rare to have private-pay clients, and unless attorneys are being appropriately compensated, we will not be able to attract qualified attorneys to serve our needs. I made my money doing other types of cases and can only afford to represent indigent clients because I am toward the end of my career and don’t have the financial obligations most young lawyers do...[T]he hourly rate for assigned counsel needs to be increased in order to have attorneys available to handle these matters.”

2. Relax residency requirements for public positions

Attorneys

The idea that public employees who live where they work are more invested in the community appears to underlie residency requirements set forth in State law. See Matter of Dehond v Nyquist, 65 Misc 2d 526 (Sup Ct, Albany Co 1971) (residency requirement aims to hire public officials who are knowledgeable and concerned about affairs of unit of government they seek to serve). Since 1829, New York has required public officers to be residents of the State, and local governments have required public officials to be residents of the locality by which they are employed. See Winkler v Spinnato, 72 NY2d 402, 405 (1988), cert denied 490 US 1005 (1989). Many things have changed in the last two centuries. Workers commute significant distances, and many work remotely. The notion that public officials will be less dedicated to their jobs absent residency mandates seems outdated and questionable.

Instead, rural communities are hurt by residency provisions. Rural justice is eroded by residency requirements, as communities cannot attract qualified talent due to such restrictions. The pool of attorneys to draw from locally is far too small in rural areas of the State. As noted previously in the Report, the vast majority (96%) of New York attorneys live and/or work in urban areas. For all these reasons, to advance rural justice, the concept of “community” should be broadened to encompass rural regions, and residency requirements found in State law and other relevant laws should be relaxed.

The primary residency statute for “public officers,” is found in Public Officers Law § 3 (1), which provides that “[n]o person shall be capable of holding a civil office who shall not***[be] a resident of the political subdivision***of the state for which he shall be chosen.” Section 30 (1) (d) further provides that “[e]very office shall be vacant upon***[the incumbent’s] ceasing to be an inhabitant***of the political subdivision***of which he is required to be a resident when chosen.” The terms “resident” and “inhabitant” are understood to be synonymous with “domicile.” See Matter of Hosley v Curry, 85 NY2d 447, 451 (1995).

Section 3 contains a patchwork of numerous special laws that provide for more flexible residency requirements as to certain attorney or judge positions in individual villages, towns, cities, or counties. See e.g. subdivisions (37), (38), (40), (44), (46), (64), (69). Typical exceptions declare that a specified town or city official need only reside in the county in which the city is located, or the specified county official may reside in an adjoining county. Specific positions covered include Town and Village Court Justices, City Court Judges, Assistant District Attorneys, Assistant Public Defenders, Deputy County Attorneys, and City Attorneys. Some exceptions are broad, such as subdivision (28), providing that all public officers employed in Westchester County may reside anywhere in the State of New York. Other State laws that impose residency mandates on officials, and thus are implicated by this analysis and recommendation, include Town Law § 23 (1) and Village Law § 3-300.

Insight into why some localities sought special residency laws can be gleaned from one Memorandum of Support of an Assembly bill that resulted in such a special law—Public

Officers Law § 3 (64) (Wyoming County Assistant District Attorneys, except the Chief or First ADA, may reside in adjoining county). The justification in the memo explained:

The Assistant District Attorney position requires a set of unique skills and specialized experiences...This bill has been introduced at the request of the Wyoming County District Attorney. It is essential that predominantly rural counties...have the same ability as...[other] counties with a higher population to recruit practitioners with the necessary skills and experience...Exceptions for the residency requirement...have typically been granted to counties with smaller populations...Adoption of this legislation will provide the Wyoming District Attorney with a more flexible recruiting process by allowing the District Attorney to hire from adjoining rural counties...[that] share many of the same characteristics as Wyoming County, ensuring that the interests of Wyoming County are adequately represented.

As the memo indicates, strict residency requirements work against localities' ability to find skilled attorneys to fill public positions; and since adjoining rural counties share many of the same characteristics, nothing is lost by imposing a less parochial approach to hiring talent.

In addition to the state law, some local laws impose residency mandates. As to some positions, localities have the authority to enact local laws providing for stricter or more liberal residency requirements than Public Officers Law § 3, and many have exercised that authority. See generally Matter of Ricket v Mahan, 97 AD3d 1062 (3rd Dept 2012) (discussing Public Officers Law residency provisions and localities' home-rule powers). The result of the current State requirements and exemptions and the local laws is an inconsistent mélange of residency provisions that do not serve New York well and that undermine the consistent administration of rural justice. To overcome the challenges faced by under-resourced municipalities and to attract qualified employees, the State law on residency requirements should be reformed. Further, rural localities should be discouraged from enacting local provisions providing for stricter requirements.

Relaxing state law residency requirements for the public positions set forth above, as well as for attorney officials at County Departments of Social Services, would make it more practicable for a larger pool of attorneys to work in rural areas. Opportunities regarding where attorneys may hold public office, while also engaging in private practice, would be broadened. The desired flexibility could be achieved as to county positions by removing any residency requirement, except for requiring New York state residence, or by providing that the officials could reside in a county adjacent to the county in which the positions are held.

In the area of public defense, flexibility as to residency could have a particularly profound impact. The case of Hurrell-Harring v State of NY brought attention to the State's failure to provide for effective representation to criminal defendants. A settlement in that case resulted in significant State funding to the five named counties to improve the quality of criminal defense by public defenders and assigned private attorneys.<sup>39</sup> The reforms embodied in the settlement are now being implemented throughout the State, pursuant to Executive Law § 832 (4) and State Legislature budget plans for incremental implementation of the State funding of public defense.

Hundreds of public defense positions have been added in rural counties across New York. Moreover, assigned counsel programs are expanding, becoming more structured,<sup>40</sup> and receiving significant resources. To recruit qualified applicants to serve in rural public defender offices and as administrators and supervising attorneys at assigned counsel programs, greater flexibility in State laws as to the county of residence will be needed. Further, by allowing private attorneys from adjoining counties to participate on assigned counsel panels, counties will be able to attract more talent. These attorneys can help deliver quality representation to criminal defendants and Family Court litigants, while achieving professional growth via the mentoring, second-chair, training, and other resources that are being provided, or will soon be provided, to such programs via State funding. The importance of also increasing assigned counsel rates to achieve the public defense reforms contemplated by the Legislature was already discussed above.

3. Raise small-claims-court caps

Small-claims courts are special parts in justice, city, and district courts where litigants can sue for money damages. Uniform Justice Court Act § 202 provides that, where justice courts handle small claims actions for money damages, the amount sought to be recovered, or the value of the property at issue, must not exceed $3,000. The statute was last amended more than four decades ago (L 1977, ch 685, § 2). Uniform City Court Act § 1801 and Uniform District Court Act § 1801 have a cap of $5,000—an amount set in 2003 (L 2003, ch 601, § 3).<sup>41</sup>

The decades-old jurisdictional limits are too low, and the Task Force recommends that they be raised to a uniform amount of at least $10,000 for all Town, Village, City, and District Courts. This change could close a justice gap and allow for proper representation of rural clients, while bolstering the practices of rural attorneys and advancing judicial economy. Often litigants with disputes involving relatively small matters cannot afford the attorney fees and court expenses, multiple appearances, and delays associated with initiating a civil case in Supreme Court. In contrast, small claims in rural areas can be brought in front of an appropriate Town or Village Court.<sup>42</sup> While litigants can represent themselves in these small claims courts, many are reluctant to do so and, in fact, cannot do so effectively. Increasing the monetary maximum will mean that more cases could be handled in small claims courts, where the filing fees are nominal. Rural practitioners could potentially expand their practice by obtaining fees in a large volume of such matters, while helping their neighbors favorably resolve their disputes.

4. Eliminate will-filing fees

SCPA 2402 (9) (v) regarding Surrogate’s Court filing fees states that a $45 fee applies as to “a will for safekeeping pursuant to section 2507 of this act except that the court in any county may reduce or dispense with such fee.” The fees are discretionary, but should be eliminated entirely. This could benefit rural solo lawyers whose practices includes estate planning and administration and the filing of a large volume of wills. Such an amendment would also benefit the estates by encouraging the best practice of filing of wills with the court. Given the prevalence of indigent clients in rural communities and the tremendous amount of pro bono or low bono services offered by rural lawyers, this filing fee is unnecessarily cost-prohibitive.

C. NYSBA Action

Offer assistance and consultation for lawyers in transition

NYSBA’s 2020 legislative priorities declare that a core mission of the Association is to represent the interests of the legal profession, and that the Association thus works to ensure that attorneys are able to protect their clients’ interests and effectively engage in the practice of law.<sup>43</sup> The creation of the Rural Justice Task Force was an important step toward helping attorneys to engage in the practice of law in rural New York.

In this regard, the NYSBA Law Practice Management Committee has published an invaluable Planning Ahead Guide, including information regarding succession planning and the sale of a law practice. Further, the State Bar’s Committee on Lawyers in Transition provides excellent, free programs to members regarding transitioning or retiring.<sup>44</sup> The Task Force suggests that an additional service be offered by the State Bar: free, individualized consultations on succession planning and the sale of a law practice. Such a service is provided by the North Carolina Bar Association Transitioning Lawyers Commission.<sup>45</sup> As many rural New York attorneys are approaching retirement age, they could benefit greatly from particularized, expert guidance and assistance regarding transition plans.

Further, services could be expanded to include a mentoring program to connect transitioning attorneys with new attorneys interested in taking over an established practice. Also, rural attorneys could be encouraged to use www.lawyerexchange.com to post announcements regarding the sale of their practices. This could serve two purposes: first, it could facilitate the sale of the practices to the advantage of the selling attorneys; and second, it could help draw more attorneys to rural communities by making them aware of the attractive opportunities that exist.

IV. BROADBAND & TECHNOLOGY INTERVENTIONS

The practice of law has transformed over time, given the rise in technology. Many solo and small-firm practitioners adopt technology in order to streamline their practice, as well as to handle firm business outside of a standard office space. However, such technology adoption is reliant on the infrastructure available in their office, home, business, or courthouse. A number of rural attorneys who responded to the Government Law Center’s survey complained about technological shortcomings.<sup>46</sup> We have discovered in our research that such technological shortcomings arise from the lack of technology infrastructure in many instances. In fact, the American Bar Association has recognized that lack of access to highspeed broadband is a hurdle for access-to-justice efforts. Recognizing this, the American Bar Association passed a resolution in August 2019 urging “federal, state, local, territorial, and tribal legislatures to enact legislation and appropriate adequate funding to ensure equal access to justice for Americans living in rural communities by deploying, to at least 98% of the population, broadband infrastructure with a download speed of at least 100 megabits per second [Mbps], and an upload speed of at least 30 Mbps.”<sup>47</sup>

To that end, New York State has a program in place presently called “Broadband for All”<sup>48</sup> which calls for investment in the state’s broadband capacity with the ultimate goal of 99.9% of New Yorkers having access to broadband. This plan was created in 2015, to be handled in three phases. The last phase, “Round III,” awarded 43 projects $209.7 million dollars to handle “last mile” connectivity.<sup>49</sup> However, that last round was announced on January 31, 2018, with the effect of it being the end of this multi-year program. As is well understood, such connectivity is hindered by geography, distances between connection points, tower placements, as well as costs involved with laying miles of cabling, whether fiber optic or otherwise. To put it in perspective, one CEO of a broadband company that we spoke with quoted a basic cost of $20,000-$25,000 per mile for infrastructure. This does not include the cost to connect from the pole to the individual home(s), which is dependent upon pole location. Depending on the distance from the closest pole, that cost may double. So, by whom should the costs be borne, and will the end users be able to afford the service if finally made available?

Satellite internet is often the only other option you have available should you be too far away from a pole for broadband to be economically feasible. There are only two residential satellite internet providers available in the entire United States, Viasat and HughesNet.<sup>50</sup> HughesNet download speeds top out at 25Mbps<sup>51</sup>, or a quarter of what's considered standard broadband speeds, and Viasat offers speeds of "up to 25Mbps."<sup>52</sup> In the case of HughesNet, they throttle the speed once users reach 50GB of usage in a month, meaning that it will be considerably slower for the remainder of the period. Both plans cost between $60 and $150 a month. By comparison, nationwide average download speed of a Verizon cellphone on their LTE network is 53.3 Mbps.<sup>53</sup>

In effect you have two issues, not just one. If you have broadband service at your home or office, you may be able to do work and service clients. But if you leave your home or office, what then? The instant always-on connectivity that so many of us take for granted may end once you are out of the radius of your router. That is because your cellphone, probably the most important article in an attorney's bag, becomes a worthless brick without a cell phone signal to back it up. Travel through upstate New York with some of your colleagues to find out how important that fickle signal can be. The following anecdotes demonstrate the challenge:

"Providing colleagues or family members with name and address of court along with the route you will be traveling in the event something was to happen to you i.e. car breaking down or getting lost because you are traveling in areas where there is no cell phone reception and often times the GPS signal on direction apps gets lost."

"Serving process on someone in the middle of nowhere with no ability to access public safety without reception."

"Trying to broker a stipulation when you are trying and failing to get a signal in a courthouse to call an out-of-area client, and hoping you don't have to ask for the judge's landline in order to do so."

At the same time, technology has changed and will continue to change during the rollout of these plans. In the newest iteration of cellular technology, 5G, the fastest signals are created with many small cell sites, which need to be much closer together than today's standard technologies. Even so, each cell site must be connected to a network backbone, whether through a wired or wireless connection.<sup>54</sup> That implies that a network backbone is present, but in many rural areas it is not.

While this is certainly problematic for legal providers, it is also troublesome for legal clients. Trying to contact and do work with clients who also live rurally can be abnormally challenging. Distance and technology combine to be a strong issue when it comes to getting documents to and from clients, getting those documents filed with courts, and service of process are just some of the challenges faced by rural practitioners. Many upstate county courts, not including town and village courts, have been slow to implement e-filing, if they have at all. As of December 2019, 52 of 62 counties have some sort of e-filing, but current legislation does not authorize town and village courts to do so. If you have no internet, you cannot e-file or implement any technology at all into the court system. Given the distances involved in the larger counties, it makes sense to offer such opportunities to file even at the basic county level. Some of these counties have no cities, which makes the county courthouse the only point of service for purposes of any civil actions. To that end, the lack of scanned documents in real time can make for additional travel for practitioners. By either e-filing or at least providing real time access to non-electronic documents would allow attorneys to access the documents without bothering the court staff and not have to rely upon clients to transport copies of these documents to them. Many of these clients have transportation issues, lack of access to scanners or fax machines, forcing actual paper copies to become the only viable record available for review.

Currently, Monroe County has a Justice for All Initiative which includes the county's village and town justice courts, where they are collecting data on the number of filings, defaults, representations, and dispositions as well as surveying litigants about their experiences. Part of the initiative may be further expanded into working on transportation issues. Litigants have been found to have a lack of transportation in far-flung areas, making physical access to justice an ongoing issue, given the requirements for in-person appearances and lack of telephonic/video conference opportunities.

With all this as background to the many technological challenges for rural legal practice, we make the following recommendations:

1. NYSBA should adopt a resolution that urges New York State to enact further legislation and adequate funding to expand and continue the Broadband for All program with a Phase 4 round of funding. The goal of Phase 4 should be further deployment of reliable broadband infrastructure with a download speed of at least 100 Mbps and an upload speed of at least 30 Mbps for 100% of New Yorkers with a specific focus on the rural areas that were not served by Phase 3 of the program. We recommend the following steps:
  - a. New York State should require the creation of a granular database of all broadband serviceable locations at the completion of Phase 3 to "map the gap" which will allow policymakers to target where funds should be allocated. (Using the same methods as was used in the US Telecom broadband initiative pilot project in Virginia and Missouri or those suggested by the FCC granular mapping initiative).
  - b. Specifically target additional funding to those "gap" areas where the Broadband for All program did not extend access to broadband at speeds of 100/30 Mbps.

2. Monitor and track the Monroe County Justice for All pilot project. This project includes initiatives around real-time access to filings in civil matters, transportation to court in civil matters, uniform data collection and a court monitoring project in the town and village justice courts. Assuming that this program will be successful in breaking down these particular barriers to accessing justice, NYSBA should advocate for its expansion throughout the state.
3. The Office of Court Administration should promulgate guidelines to encourage and promote remote video conference appearances in town and village justice courts (and across all New York courts) by attorneys and litigants for civil matters using the available Skype technology already provided to town and village courts, or other similar technology.
4. The Office of Court Administration should continue to expand e-filing initiatives across the state as these important initiatives provide easier access to the courts for both practitioners and litigants alike. Legislation should be passed to authorize e-filing expansion into town and village justice courts.
5. NYSBA should again recommend the repeal of Judiciary Law §470 requiring a physical office in New York State. (This recommendation was previously adopted by the NYSBA Working Group on Judiciary Law §470, October 8, 2018.)

V. LAW AND POLICY INTERVENTION

The Committee on Law and Policy examined other laws and rules that affected rural practice. In particular, the Committee examined New York Court Rule §100.6(B)(2), which provides:

(B) Part-Time Judge. A part-time judge:

(2) shall not practice law in the court on which the judge serves, or in any other court in the county in which his or her court is located, before a judge who is permitted to practice law, and shall not act as a lawyer in a proceeding in which the judge has served as a judge or in any other proceeding related thereto;

The Committee examined this rule particularly in light of the longstanding NYSBA policy against non-lawyer judges. In 2009, the House of Delegates adopted the Report of the Committee on Court Structure and Judicial Selection, which was charged with reviewing the 2008 Report of the Chief Judge's Commission on the Future of the State Courts. The Commission Report had concluded that lawyer judges were desirable, but because of claims of feasibility, it had stopped short of seeking a constitutional amendment to require that all justices be lawyers. The NYSBA report in response reiterated the NYSBA position that all justices should be lawyers. The report also included the history of the NYSBA position, noting that such a position had been taken on numerous occasions going back to 1979.

The part-time judge rule in §100.6(B)(2) has been in effect for many decades, previously as Rule 100.5(f), and before that as Rule 33.5(f). There are three different extra-judicial activities prohibited: (1) The practice of law by the part-time judge in his/her own court, (2) the practice of law by the part-time judge in another court within the same county, if that judge is also permitted to practice law, and (3) the participation as a lawyer in any proceeding in which the judge has acted as a judge, or in any proceeding related to one in which the judge acted as judge. The Committee recommends maintaining the first and third of these prohibitions in their current form, and removing the second prohibition.

The rationale for the second prohibition has been stated in several opinions and disciplinary proceedings as to avoid the appearance of impropriety in the nature of a quid pro quo between part-time lawyer judges. Interestingly, where discipline is sought for violation of 100.6(B)(2), there are usually other provisions violated, particularly where the judge has participated in a case that truly creates a conflict or other improper activity. In the one reported case where the lawyer judge was subject to the disciplinary commission, the commission unanimously imposed an admonition only.<sup>55</sup>

The rule has produced several opinions allowing the part-time lawyer judge to appear before an OCA employee who is a part-time judge,<sup>56</sup> a lawyer licensed to practice only in another state,<sup>57</sup> and a lawyer who is retired from the practice of law.<sup>58</sup> There have also been opinions regarding engineering the part-time judge's client cases before full-time, rather than part-time, judges in city, town and village courts. This is not permitted by transferring cases assigned to part-time judges to full-time judges<sup>59</sup>, but it is permitted in a prospective way by an administrative judge,<sup>60</sup> and is permitted upon transfer down from Supreme Court by CPLR 325.<sup>61</sup> In addition, because Rule 100.6(B)(3) provides that the prohibition of practice of a part-time judge before other part-time judges does not extend to the judge's associates and partners (although the prohibition of practice in the judge's own court does extend to any lawyer associated in any way with the judge), there have also been opinions allowing the associates to use a letterhead which includes the lawyer/judge's name as long as there is no indication on the letterhead that the lawyer is a judge.<sup>62</sup>

The Committee concluded that the rule has a limited benefit. This is because the lawyer judge is governed by both the Rules of Judicial Conduct and the Rules of Professional Conduct which would otherwise prohibit any sort of quid pro quo between part-time lawyer judges. In addition, where an associate of a part-time judge appears before a part-time judge of another court in the same county, that associate may use a law firm name and stationery which uses the name of the part-time judge. Thus, the judge who the associate appears before may know full well that the associate has a relationship with the part-time judge. It should be noted that non-lawyer judges are not subject to Rules of Professional Conduct and have no specific rule regarding conflicts akin to Rule 100.6(B)(2). Accordingly, this rule effects only attorney part-time judges, and creates an unfair chilling effect on them, while part-time non-attorney judges continue to serve on the bench freely, even where appearances of impropriety exist. For instance, where a non-attorney part-time judge works in law enforcement within the county, but presides over criminal cases with county prosecutors appearing before them.

The presence of the rule is a considerable deterrent to lawyers in rural areas to seek positions as part-time judges. While there may be a substantial number of part-time judges who are lawyers in suburban settings, there are relatively few in rural areas. For example, in the 20 justice courts in Franklin County there is only one practicing lawyer and one retired lawyer; all of the rest are non-lawyers.

The Task Force believes that the modification of this rule will result in more lawyer judges, in furtherance of the longstanding NYSBA policy that justices should be lawyers, and recommends that the Chief Administrative Judge amend the rule to partially eliminate the second prohibition as it relates to non-contiguous town and village courts as follows:

(B) Part-Time Judge. A part-time judge:

(2) shall not practice law in the court on which the judge serves, or in any other contiguous town or village court in the county in which his or her court is located, before a judge who is permitted to practice law, and shall not act as a lawyer in a proceeding in which the judge has served as a judge or in any other proceeding related thereto;

*****

A minority of the Task Force did not support the amendment, concluding that lawyer judges often have substantial practices and can appear before full-time judges and part-time non-lawyer judges. This is true only because presently there are so few part-time lawyer judges in rural settings. If NYSBA's policy to have all attorney justices were to come to fruition, this rule would have a significant effect on a lawyer judge's practice, and is, in fact, a deterrent to fulfilling this NYSBA policy.

CONCLUSION

As amply demonstrated in this Report, we face formidable challenges in ensuring that rural legal services are adequately delivered and administered with a fair and even hand. To be sure, a great society—a just society—is judged not on the success of the successful, but upon its response to those in need. The time has come to recognize that those in need include the many families and individuals who reside in rural New York. We hope that our diverse proposed interventions ameliorate some of these critical issues and that the full panoply of stakeholders who need to be involved to initiate these interventions step up, as we must do something about the imminent crisis before us. Thank you for your careful consideration.

APPENDIX A

BACKGROUND TO TASK FORCE ON RURAL JUSTICE

I. Date of Formation & Composition

The Task Force on Rural Justice was formed on June 1, 2019. It is comprised of 32 members from across New York State with diverse expertise. Members are rural and urban practitioners, members of the judiciary, policymakers, academics, legal services organization leaders, and state officers. See member roster in Appendix 2.

II. Mission Statement

The Task Force organized its work in pursuit of the following mission statement:

The Task Force on Rural Justice shall examine the current state of rural law practice in New York. Topics of investigation will include the impact of rural attorney shortages on access-to-justice, challenges in delivering legal services in rural areas, and the unique practice needs of rural practitioners. The Task Force will make recommendations for potential changes in law and public policy, and will identify viable solutions to support rural law practice and greater access-to-justice in New York's rural communities.

III. Meetings & Expert Presenters

The Task Force met a total of ten (10) times between June 24, 2019 and March 5, 2020. A total of six (6) experts presented to the Task Force on the following dates and topics:

August 21, 2019	Hon. Elizabeth Garry, Presiding Justice of the Appellate Division, 3 rd Department	Remarks on the unique challenges and rewards of rural practice and the administration of justice
	Jim Sandman, President of Legal Services Corporation	Overview of federal legal services funding streams with a focus on rural legal services
September 25, 2019	Robin Blakely-Armitage, Senior Extension Associate and Project Manager at Cornell's Community and Regional Development Institute (CaRDI)	Rural demographics and data trends in NYS.
October 15, 2019	Nancy Sunukjian, Director of the Office of Town Justice Support	Town & Village Court system and administration—opportunities and challenges
October 30, 2019	Bill Leahy, Executive Director of the Office of Indigent Legal Services (ILS)	On ILS efforts to address shortage of public defenders across NYS

	Donna Kissane, Franklin County Manager	Difficulties recruiting new attorneys to fill legal positions in Franklin County government, a rural county in the North Country.
--	--	---

The co-chairs carefully selected those experts that could educate members on specialized categories of knowledge most relevant to our work. The entire Task Force is tremendously grateful to all the illustrious experts that offered their time and resources to educate our members. It was an invaluable public service that informed the development of the recommendations contained herein.

IV. Task Force Sub-Committees

The “Rural Package” approach to our work compelled dividing our members across five sub-committees which focused on a discrete subject-matter that would then feed into our diversified interventions. Each member selected one-to-two sub-committees to serve on, and each sub-committee had 1-2 chairs to facilitate the work. The five sub-committees and the members that served on them were:

Rural Law Practice	Broadband & Technology	Funding	Law Schools & New Attorneys	Law & Policy
Scott Clippinger	Scott Clippinger	Taalib Horton	Sarah Gold	Gary A. Rosa
Chris Denton	Sarah Gold	Hon. Molly Reynolds Fitzgerald	Leah Nowotarski	Cynthia Feathers
Richard Lewis	Richard Lewis	Heidi Dennis	Hon. Molly Reynolds Fitzgerald	Leah Nowotarski
Daniel J. Fitzsimmons	Hon. Julie A. Campell	Richard Rifkin	Joanne Macri	Scott Fein
Marcy Flores	Taier Perlman	Brian Stewart	Tucker Stanclift	Hon. lloyd G. Grandy II
Tucker Stanclift	Robert M. Winn		Timothy Fennell	Heidi Dennis
John Ferrara		Ken Perri		Hon. Thomas Mercure
Hon. Mary M. Tarantelli	Willa Payne		Andy Ayers
Hon. Stan L. Pritzker				Sharon Stern Gertsman
				Richard Rifkin
Hon. Thomas Mercure
Brian S. Stewart
Sub-Committee Chairs

These smaller working groups spent several weeks discussing their subject-matter in numerous remote conferences. They conferred with experts, researched, and worked collaboratively to devise recommendations for consideration by the entire Task Force. These recommendations were submitted to the co-chairs on November 1, 2019. The Task Force then convened three times to substantively discuss the recommendations put forth by each sub-committee. During these discussions, the Task Force collectively decided which recommendations to advance forward into the final report, subject to final approval by the co-chairs, and the entire Task Force in later editions of the Report.

The co-chairs are deeply thankful to all the sub-committees for their outstanding efforts in meeting our accelerated timeline. The quality and thoughtfulness of the recommendations that came from the sub-committees was truly impressive, and is a testament to the dedication and passion the sub-committee chairs and members brought to their work. The organic production of the sub-committee reports laid the foundation of our package of proposals.

APPENDIX F

Summary of Recommendations of the NYSBA Task Force on Rural Justice

The Task Force devised a number of interventions across five distinct categories, which in totality, make up a package of targeted proposals to ameliorate the access-to-justice crisis in rural New York. Herein is a summary of the recommended interventions. Full discussion of them can be found in the Report, pages 15-37.

I. Funding Related Interventions

- New York Direct Pay Model-Furnish eligible applicants a 5-year direct payment of $22,148 per year provided they agree to, among other things, practice in defined rural areas throughout the state during the benefit period.
- Student Loan Repayment Programs-(i) Promotion and advocacy by NYSBA of existing loan-repayment-assistance programs; and (ii) Raise the amount of annual award in NYS District Attorney and Indigent Legal Services Attorney Loan Forgiveness Program from $3,400 per year to $5,500 per year and reduce to wait time to access the program.
- Tuition Assistance Program-Expand the NYS Excelsior program to cover eligible students who wish to practice in rural areas.

II. Law School and New Attorney Interventions

- Assessment of Existing and potential programs-Gather data and assess how existing and potential law school programs promote rural access to justice.
- The Law Schools' Role in providing direct-services-Law schools should assess their ability to provide direct clinical services, in conjunction with other existing service providers, in the context of significant financial challenges these programs present.
- The Law Schools' role in training and providing attorneys who wish to practice in rural areas-(i) Assess the curricular with an eye towards the needs of rural attorneys, including substantive and skill-based training and increase access to on-line learning; (ii) increase students' access to information about rural practice; (iii) change the way rural practice is perceived by negating the perception that earning big bucks defines success; and (iii) foster an employment pipeline to jobs in rural communities.

III. Rural Law Practice Interventions

- Raise 18-B rates.
- Relax certain residency requirements for attorneys who wish to become public officers in rural areas to increase the talent pool.
- Raise the cap on small claims cases to at least $10,000.
- Eliminate will filing fees.

- NYSBA should offer further assistance and consultation for lawyers in transition. Mentoring younger attorneys and connecting them with retiring attorneys should be pursued.

IV. Broadband and Technology Interventions

- NYSBA should adopt a resolution that urges New York State to enact further legislation and adequate funding to expand and continue the Broadband for All program with a Phase 4 round of funding. The goal of Phase 4 should be further deployment of reliable broadband infrastructure with a download speed of at least 100 megabits per second and an upload speed of at least 30 megabits per second for 100% of New Yorkers with a specific focus on the rural areas that were not served by Phase 3 of the program.
- Monitor and track the Monroe County Justice for All pilot project which includes initiatives around real-time access to filings in civil matters, transportation to court in civil matters, uniform data collection and a court monitoring project in the town and village justice courts. If successful, NYSBA should advocate for its expansion throughout the state.
- The Office of Court Administration should promulgate guidelines to encourage and promote remote video conference appearances in town and village justice courts (and across all New York courts) by attorneys and litigants for civil matters using the available SKYPE technology already provided to town and village courts, or other similar technology.
- The Office of Court Administration should continue to expand e-filing initiatives across the state. Legislation should be passed to authorize e-filing expansion into town and village justice courts.
- NYSBA should again recommend the repeal of Judiciary Law §470 requiring a physical office in New York State.

V. Law and Policy Intervention

- Amend Court Rule 100.6 (B) (2) to allow part-time attorney judges to practice in courts where other part-time attorney judges preside within the same county as follows:

(B) Part-Time Judge. A part-time judge:

(2) shall not practice law in the court on which the judge serves, or in any other contiguous town or village court in the county in which his or her court is located, before a judge who is permitted to practice law, and shall not act as a lawyer in a proceeding in which the judge has served as a judge or in any other proceeding related thereto;
