We Are Messengers

Fronted by Irishman Darren Mulligan, We Are Messengers makes rowdy music for broken, messy people and points them to Jesus. They've had enormous success in just a few years, playing for a live audience of two million and boasting several Top 5 and Top 10 Billboard Christian Airplay hits, such as "Magnify," and "Image of God." In 2019, the group played for more than half a million people across 40 states and five countries, selling out shows in America, the Netherlands, England, and Mulligan's native Ireland. The band's sophomore album "Power," released in January 2020, features the award-winning, self-acceptance anthem, "Maybe It's Ok," hailed as, "air to a drowning man," by "Rawkus Magazine," and, "potent, effective and liberating," by "Thrive Global."
