

European Parliament: Facts and Figures

This Briefing, published by the European Parliamentary Research Service, is designed to provide key facts and figures about the European Parliament. It looks at both the current parliamentary term (July 2019 to June 2024) and the eight previous five-year terms since direct elections were introduced in June 1979.

On the following pages you will find graphics of various kinds which:

- detail the composition of the European Parliament now and in the past;
- trace the increase in the number of parties represented in the EP and the evolution of political groups;
- show the age of Members and chart the rise in the number of women sitting in the Parliament;
- explain the electoral systems used in elections to the Parliament across the Member States;
- show how turnout in European elections has changed over time and varied between Member States;
- summarise the work of the Parliament in the current and previous five-year terms;
- outline the composition of the Parliament's committees, delegations and governing bodies;
- explain the legislative role of the Parliament and its interaction with the European Commission.

The Briefing is being updated regularly over the 2019-24 term to take account of latest developments.

European Parliament, 2019-24

Size of the political groups

Number of Members in each political group as of 1 October 2021.

Proportion of Members in each political group

Share of the total 705 Members in the Parliament by political group.

The seven political groups in the current Parliament, in order of size, are:

- Group of the European People's Party (Christian Democrats) (EPP),
- Group of the Progressive Alliance of Socialists and Democrats (S&D),
- Renew Europe Group,
- Group of the Greens/European Free Alliance (Greens/EFA),
- Identity and Democracy Group (ID),
- European Conservatives and Reformists Group (ECR),
- The Left Group in the European Parliament - GUE/NGL.

In addition, some MEPs sit as non-attached Members (Non-inscrits – NI).

New and re-elected MEPs in 2019

New MEPs in July 2019 are defined as those who had never sat in the European Parliament before. They represented 60 % of the total. The percentage varied between 86 % in Slovakia – where 12 of 14 MEPs were new – and 38 % in Slovenia (3 of 8). Among the political groups, Identity and Democracy (ID) had the highest percentage of new MEPs, with 57 new MEPs out of 72.

- New MEPs who had never sat in the European Parliament.
- Re-elected MEPs who were in the EP during at least the previous term (2014-19).
- Re-elected MEPs who were in the EP during a previous term, but not during the 2014-19 term.

Share of new MEPs by Member State

Share of new MEPs by political group

In the first two years of the current parliamentary term (July 2019 to June 2021), a total of 25 MEPs were replaced for different reasons. Five MEPs resigned, one died, and 19 were appointed to an office incompatible with membership of the European Parliament – for instance, they became members of their national parliaments or governments. Furthermore, with the United Kingdom's departure from the EU on 31 January 2020, the 73 Members elected in the UK left the European Parliament.

Age of MEPs

The graphs below and to the right show the average age of MEPs, together with their highest and lowest ages, both collectively and by Member State. The average age of MEPs is 52 years; national averages vary between 45 and 62. The youngest MEP is from Denmark (23 years old) and the oldest is from Italy (84 years old).

Age distribution of MEPs

The graph below represents the age distribution of the 705 MEPs. It shows, for instance, that 200 MEPs are aged between 41 and 50 years. The mode – the most common value – is 58 years and the median – the middle value – is, like the average, 52 years. The majority of MEPs are aged between 41 and 60 years old.

Proportion of men and women in the EP

The proportion of women among all MEPs at the beginning of each parliamentary term has grown steadily, starting at 16.6 % in the first term, in July 1979, and reaching 40.6 %, the highest percentage so far, at the beginning of the current term, in July 2019.

Women in the EP and EU national parliaments

Comparison between the average representation of women in national parliaments in Member States and in the European Parliament shows that both have increased over time. The line for national parliaments up to 1996 is illustrative only, based on data available for a limited number of Member States. A marked increase in the percentage of women in national parliaments can be seen in the mid-2000s, which is partly a consequence of the introduction of gender quotas for elections in several Member States (for example, France - 2000, Belgium - 2002, Portugal - 2006, Spain - 2007).

Women MEPs by Member State

The percentage of women MEPs in the current European Parliament varies between zero in Cyprus and 57 % in Sweden. In the May 2019 elections, eleven Member States had gender quotas, which mostly concern the make-up of electoral lists, applying to both sexes, to avoid the under-representation of either.

European Parliament, 1979-2019

Strengths of the political groups in each parliamentary term

The relative size of the political groups in the European Parliament is shown for each of the nine parliamentary terms since the first direct elections in 1979. The data, in percentages of total seats, refer to the constituent session (in July) at the beginning of each parliamentary term. The last column on the right shows the composition of the Parliament as of 1 October 2021.

Source: DG Communication, European Parliament.

The colours used to denote political groups in the current parliamentary term are also used retrospectively for previous terms, so that the history of today's groups can be traced back. However, the names and constitutions of political groups, and indeed their membership, can change frequently. So, whilst we can often identify substantial continuity between the current groups and their predecessors, they cannot in every cases be regarded as the same group with an unbroken history. The category 'others' includes a number of groups which no longer exist.

National parties and political groups in the EP

Over the nine terms of the Parliament to date, the successive increases in the number of Member States and MEPs have been outpaced by the growth in the number of national political parties represented in the EP. Whilst the number of political groups has fluctuated between seven and ten – it is currently seven – the threshold for forming a group has been raised over time, and groups have included Members from a greater number of parties from a greater number of Member States – 202 national political parties today, compared with 127 in 1999, and 57 in 1979.

Electoral system for the European Parliament

Voting system and number of MEPs

The EP currently has 705 seats, as opposed to 751, the maximum permitted under the EU Treaties, as it did between 2014 and January 2020. Following the United Kingdom's departure from the EU on 31 January 2020, and with it the loss of the country's 73 MEPs, an additional 27 Members from 14 Member States joined the Parliament, as shown in the table below. The Member States concerned had already made provision for filling those seats at the June 2019 elections.

Member States gaining additional seats on 1 February 2020

Member State:	FR	ES	IT	NL	IE	PL	RO	SE	AT	DK	SK	FI	HR	EE	TOTAL
Additional seats:	5	5	3	3	2	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	27

NB: These seats are included in the totals for each country shown on the map.

The 705 MEPs are elected under national electoral systems, but these have to observe certain common principles established in EU law, notably proportional representation (PR). As a general rule, under PR, voters can choose between political parties, individual candidates or both. Whilst in some Member States, voters can only vote for a list, with no possibility of changing the order of candidates (closed list), in others, voters can express their preference for one or more of the candidates (preferential voting). Instead of a list system, some Member States use the single transferable vote (STV) method of PR. The map to the right shows the number of seats in each Member State (from February 2020) as well as the electoral system used in the 2019 European elections.

Electoral threshold

EU law allows Member States to establish a threshold of votes to be achieved before a party/list can be allocated seats at EP elections. At national level, this threshold may not exceed five per cent of the valid votes cast.

Turnout in European elections

Turnout in Member States at EP elections since 1979

The table below shows the turnout by Member State for each of the nine European Parliament elections held since June 1979. For each election, the colours highlight the lowest turnout among Member States, the highest turnout in a Member State without compulsory voting, and the highest turnout overall. The EU average at each election is highlighted by the horizontal line in purple.

Compulsory voting in this Member State (Voting was also compulsory in Italy from 1979 to 1989).

The line chart below shows the trajectory of turnout at the nine European Parliament elections held to date, tracking both individual Member States (grey dots) and the total for the EU as a whole (blue dots/line). Successive elections saw turnout fall until 2019. The most recent election saw turnout rise from 42.6 to 50.6 per cent (plus 8.0 per cent), making it the first contest since 1994 in which more than half the adult population of the EU voted. A similar downward trend over time is seen in the mid-term elections in the United States, where the US presidency is not at stake, again with a sharp upturn in the most recent (2018) mid-term election.

Such a downward trend can also be observed in national elections over the same period, although from a higher baseline, given that governments are also being elected in such contests.

The work of the European Parliament

The European Parliament adopts its positions by voting in plenary session on legislative and budgetary texts, as well as on own-initiative reports and other resolutions. The Parliament's 20 standing committees prepare the ground, undertaking detailed consideration of draft EU legislation and holding hearings on key issues. In the course of the EU legislative process, representatives of EP committees meet frequently with their counterparts in the Council and the European Commission, in trilateral negotiations known as 'trilogues', under the 'co-decision' procedure – see page 14.

The statistics below show that whilst the 2014-19 European Parliament sat for longer than its predecessor and held almost a third more votes, it adopted fewer texts, both legislative and non-legislative.

EP work during the coronavirus crisis

Parliamentary committees

There are 20 standing committees (and three sub-committees) in the EP, each covering a different policy area. They draw up reports for consideration in the plenary – on both legislative and non-legislative matters – and seek to hold the executive to account. The seats on each committee, and their chairs, are normally distributed among the Parliament’s political groups in proportion to the number of seats they hold in the Parliament as a whole. The chart below lists the committees of the EP, ordered by the number of MEPs who sit on them. It also shows the chairs, elected by the members of each committee, together with their political group and nationality. The chairs formally meet together in the Conference of Committee Chairs, and have elected Antonio Tajani, Chair of the Constitutional Affairs (AFCO) Committee, as their chair for the first half of the current parliamentary term.

The pie chart at the bottom shows the distribution of committee chairs between the political groups in July 2019, using the same colour code as before. In addition to the standing committees, the Parliament currently has three special committees and a committee of inquiry, whose terms are all due to expire later in 2021.

EP committees' relationship with European Commissioners

The European Parliament's 20 standing committees exercise oversight over the work of the European Commission in their respective policy fields and regularly invite Commissioners to discuss different aspects of their activities in committee meetings. While some committees correspond exclusively to a single Commission portfolio, other committees cover multiple Commissioners' areas of responsibility.

The table below shows the College of Commissioners with their portfolios and corresponding EP committees. It is derived from the autumn 2019 hearings of the then Commissioners-designate. The third column highlights those committees that work with more than one Commissioner, while the fourth column shows all committees that correspond to any given Commission portfolio. For example, the remit of the Environment, Public Health and Food Safety Committee (ENVI) covers the fields of work of three Commissioners in particular: Frans Timmermans, Stella Kyriakides and Virginijus Sinkevičius.

Inter-parliamentary delegations

The European Parliament's inter-parliamentary delegations seek to maintain and deepen relations with parliaments or parliamentarians from countries, regions and organisations outside the EU. There are currently 44 standing delegations engaged in 'parliamentary diplomacy' and they fall into three types, as set out below. The chairs of the delegations meet together in the Conference of Delegation Chairs (CDC), together with those of the three committees that work on international relations – the Committees on Foreign Affairs (AFET), Development (DEVE) and International Trade (INTA). The Chair of the CDC is currently Inmaculada Rodríguez-Piñero, Chair of the EU-Chile Delegation.

 EP delegation to a multilateral parliamentary assembly.

 EP delegation to an interparliamentary committee, established under a bilateral agreement between the EU and the partner country.

 Other delegations that meet counterparts outside any formal framework.

Note: The EP is also expected to establish a delegation with the United Kingdom Parliament in the near future.

European Parliament legislative activity, 2004-20

A core element of the European Parliament's work lies in amending and passing EU legislation. Three procedures are used for this purpose, with the most common now being the 'ordinary legislative procedure', traditionally referred to as 'co-decision'. The Parliament may also be required to give (or withhold) its consent to certain Council decisions, or may simply be consulted on certain Commission proposals. Under co-decision and consent, the EP has a right of veto over EU legal acts. When the Parliament is only consulted, it gives an opinion. The two charts below show the rise in the use of co-decision, reflecting greater EP power from successive Treaty changes, and the growing trend for the EP and Council to agree on legislative texts at the first reading of that process.

Legislative resolutions adopted in plenary

The chart below shows the number of legislative resolutions adopted in plenary each year since 2004, including at all readings for co-decision.

Co-decision procedure

The chart below shows the stage of the co-decision procedure at which the EP and Council reached agreement on individual legislative texts, for each year since 2004. As well as the total number of measures agreed, it also shows specifically the number agreed at first reading (the most common case).

It is still too early in the current parliamentary term to show the average length of time taken for the co-decision procedure, particularly given the disruption caused by coronavirus. During the previous term (July 2014 to June 2019), the average duration of each completed ordinary legislative procedure (co-decision), was 18 months for those concluded at first reading, 39 months for those concluded at second reading, and 40 months for those ending with the Council's second reading. (None went to a third reading.)

Number of trilogues per year and per committee

From July 2019 to December 2020, EP committees participated in a total of 244 trilogue meetings with the Council and Commission. The bar graph below shows the number of trilogue meetings held by year since the beginning of the 2009-14 term, with a peak in 2013, notably reflecting decisions on programmes within the 2014-20 Multiannual Financial Framework. While the number held in the second half of 2019 is in line with the number five years previously, the number held in 2020 is considerably lower than for 2015, in large part due to the coronavirus crisis restricting possibilities to meet physically. In 2020, out of 169 trilogue meetings, 138 involved a single committee, while in 31 cases, two committees took part. The pie chart shows which parliamentary committees were most involved in trilogue in 2020, the first full year of the 2019-24 term. It highlights the eight most active committees in terms of trilogue meetings held, as a percentage of the total.

Number of legislative and own-initiative reports

The chart below shows the number of reports adopted in each parliamentary committee between July 2019 and December 2020; the number in grey represents the previous term (2014-19) as a whole. 'Own-initiative reports', represented by light orange bars, include both legislative-initiative and other own-initiative reports. 'Legislative reports', by blue bars, include reports under the ordinary legislative procedure (co-decision), consent procedure and consultation procedure, as well as procedures relating to international agreements. The purple bars concern procedures in which committees consider whether to object to 'delegated' or 'implementing' acts, which are in effect forms of administrative law, adopted by the Commission under existing legislation.

Certain committees work on other types of report, in particular procedures relating to the annual budget (BUDG), the discharge of previous budget (CONT), and questions of Members' immunity in legal proceedings (JURI).

President of the European Parliament

The European Parliament's President is elected in a secret ballot of all MEPs at the start and mid-point of each five-year term, to serve for two and a half-years. The President's role is to ensure proceedings are properly conducted, inter alia chairing plenary sessions and the main governing bodies, as well as to represent the European Parliament vis-à-vis the other EU institutions and the outside world more broadly. The President may delegate tasks or powers to the Vice-Presidents who make up the Bureau (see page 16). The graphic below shows the Parliament's current President and all his predecessors since the first direct elections in 1979, with their political group and nationality.

Staff of the European Parliament

The European Parliament's permanent secretariat – headed by the Secretary-General, Klaus Welle – had a total of 6 918 staff in September 2021, of whom 38.2 % were administrators, 33.7 % assistants and 27.5 % contractual agents. In addition to the secretariat, a further 2 009 staff worked directly for Members as accredited parliamentary assistants (APAs), and 1 020 worked for the secretariats of political groups. In total, therefore, 9 947 people work in support of the 705 Members of the European Parliament in various capacities. The bar chart below shows the breakdown by gender across all of those categories of staff.

The three graphics below show the distribution of EP staff in two-year age bands, for both men and women – from left to right, for the EP secretariat, political group staff and Members' assistants. Whereas for the EP secretariat, the most numerous group is in their mid-40s, for political group staff the most common age group is in their late 30s, and for parliamentary assistants in their late 20s.

Governing bodies of the EP

The Bureau is the body responsible for financial, organisational and administrative matters within the European Parliament. It is composed of the President and the 14 Vice-Presidents, elected by an absolute majority of the votes in plenary, with the order in which they attained that majority determining their order of precedence. The five Quaestors, elected in plenary to manage administrative and financial matters directly concerning individual Members, also attend the Bureau in an advisory capacity, but cannot vote.

The Conference of Presidents (CoP) – composed of the Parliament's President and the chairs of its seven political groups – sets the agenda of the plenary and determines the general political orientations of the institution. The table below shows the current members of the CoP, ordered by size of the groups, in terms of their seats in the Parliament. Three groups have co-chairs. The non-attached (NI) Members are represented by a non-voting observer.

The two governing bodies presented above – the Bureau and the Conference of Presidents, are complemented by other coordination bodies, notably the Conference of Committee Chairs (CCC) – see page 10 – the Conference of Delegation Chairs – see page 12 – the Panel for the Future of Science and Technology (STOA Panel), and the Democracy Support and Election Coordination Group.
